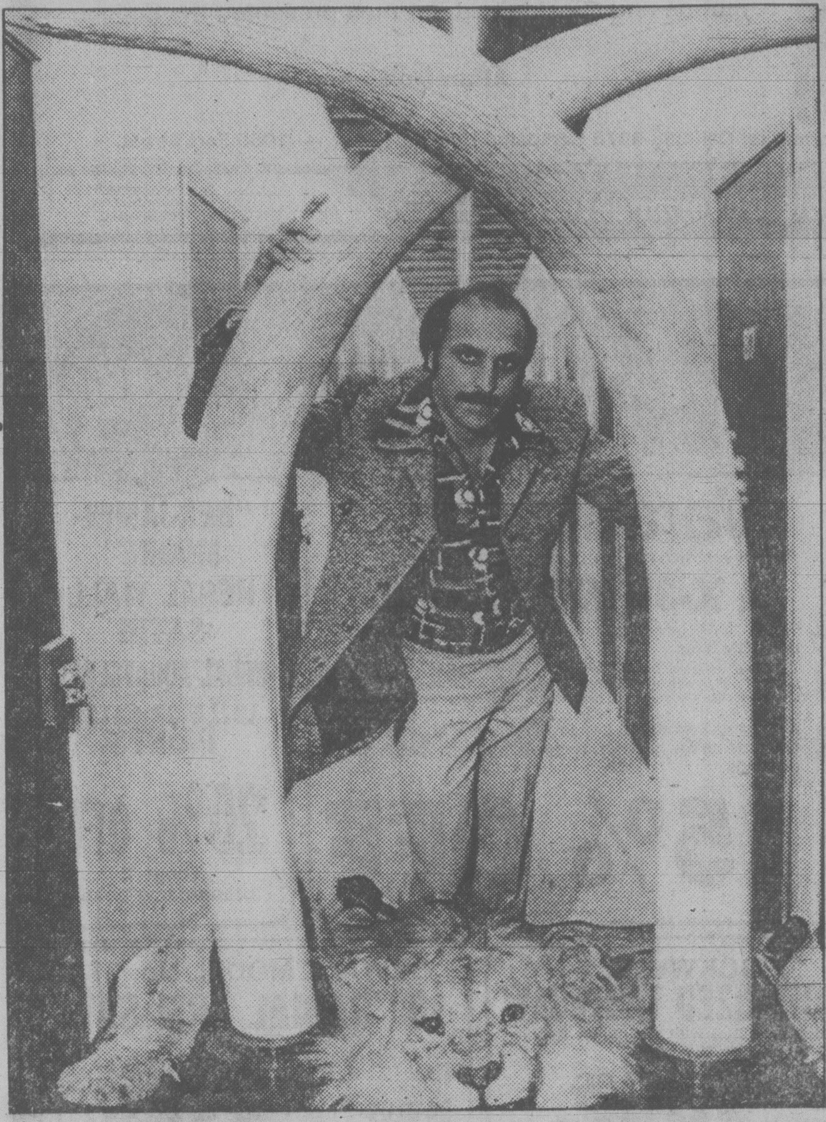
Hands off oil, Kremlin told



INFLATION SHELTER over Kmarjit Gupta of Coquitlam are two elephant tusks he feels represent a better hedge than gold. Gupta says market value of tusks has risen from $50 to $60 a kilogram to $120 a kilo in past year. That would make these tusks worth about $15,600. Gupta shot the elephant in 1970 and the lion in 1969 during hunting trips to Uganda.

Carter Doctrine sets out U.S. interests

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Using his State of the Union address to issue a 20th century version of the Monroe Doctrine, President Carter has sent the Soviet Union an unequivocal warning: keep out of the Persian Gulf — or else.

To back up his tough words, the president said he intends to push for legislation to finance the resumption of draft registration and end "unwarranted restraints" on America's intelligence agencies.

"An attempt by any outside force to gain control of the Persian Gulf region will be regarded as an assault on the vital interests of the United States of America," Carter said, affirming what may one day come to be called the Carter Doctrine.

In his nationally televised message to a joint session of Congress Wednesday night, the president said "such an assault will be repelled by use of any means necessary, including military force."

The U.S. Congress appears ready to back the tough new doctrine, although reaction was split along partisan lines. Most Democrats praising the strong warning to the Soviet Union but many Republicans calling it a political speech lacking in substance.

The House also voted overwhelmingly to keep U.S. athletes home from the 1980 Summer Olympics unless the games are moved out of the Soviet Union.

The boycott resolution is designed "to send a message of contempt to the Soviet government for their barbaric action," said Rep. William Broomfield (Rep.-Mich.) ranking Republican on the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

A similar resolution on the Moscow games is expected to receive prompt passage in the Senate.

Referring to Carter's speech, House Speaker Thomas O'Neill (Dem.-Mass.) said he is confident Congress will act "responsibly and with courage to any challenge that faces the nation."

Chairman Frank Church (Dem.-Idaho) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said Carter sent "a strong message to the Soviet Union . . . I support the president in this position."

"He was rattling the scabbard without anything in it," said House Republican leader John Rhodes of Arizona.

Rep. Robert Bauman (Rep.-Md.) chairman of the American Conservative Union, called it "one of the most incredibly meaningless displays of political pap that I've ever seen."

Meanwhile, in Moscow, the Soviet Tass news agency today described Carter's address as a "demagogical" attempt to extend the claim of U.S. "vital interests" to the entire world.

A Tass story from Washington, the first Soviet reaction to Carter's address, said any allegation of a Soviet move to take control of the Persian Gulf area was "an absurdity."

Noting that Carter mentioned American interests in Europe, the Pacific, the Middle East and Southeast Asia, Tass said: "In other words,

Restart of draft blasted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Groups representing students and women today attacked President Carter's move to resume draft registrations.

Jeff Friedman, eastern director of Students for a Libertarian Society, told a news conference compulsory registration called for by President Carter in his Wednesday State of the Union message is "regimentation and a violation of individual liberty — tyranny."

"True patriots will resist that tyranny," he said.

It is unrealistic to try to contain communism by force of arms, said Friedman.

"A return to the Cold War does not address the causes of our foreign policy problems — it exacerbates them," he said.

The organization, which claims over 100 chapters in the United States, staged rallies last year in opposition to proposed bills in Congress for the resumption of registration. The bills never were acted on.

Also in Washington today, the National Organization for Women attacked Carter's call for registration, charging it is a first step in bringing back the "sexist and racist" draft.

"We are opposed to reinstatement of compulsory registration," said NOW President Eleanor Smeal.

Carter has not made clear whether any return to registration would include mandatory signing up by young women as well as men.

The president was informed today that preparations for mandatory military registration could be completed in several months.

Speaker to investigate RCMP bug of Nielsen

The speaker of the B.C. Legislature will inquire into the bugging of a minister's office by the RCMP.

Speaker Harvey Schroeder, who is responsible for the legislative precinct, said today he will report his findings directly to the legislature.

Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen testified in Vancouver Wednesday the RCMP secretly bugged his office while investigating an alleged bribery conspiracy.

He said he was not informed of the electronic surveillance until months afterwards.

Schroeder reserved comment on the propriety of the RCMP's action until he has had a chance to check precedents and "until I get some cracking good advice."

He expects to report to the house early in the spring session expected to open in March.

Schroeder said the bugging of Nielsen's office is the only such incident that he is aware of.

The incident raises questions about the 400-year-old tradition of parliamentary protection of members.

For example, police may not come into the legislative precinct to arrest a member.

Schroeder would not offer an opinion on whether members are also protected from bugging and wiretapping or whether the RCMP had somehow violated Nielsen's oath of cabinet secrecy.

The speaker pointed out that traditional protections have been changed over the years as experience dictated.

He said if B.C. MLA's need increased parliamentary privileges to protect themselves against modern invasions of privacy it is up to them to make the necessary changes.

Nielsen — a former environment minister in the B.C. cabinet — was testifying at the county court trial of former Vancouver radio openliner Ed Murphy and Vancouver businessman Douglas Holme.

They are charged with conspiring to offer Nielsen a benefit and one count each of conspiring to procure Nielsen to breach the trust of his office.

The Crown alleges Murphy and Holme conspired to offer Nielsen a $100,000 bribe for his influence in removing 80 acres of land in Richmond from the agricultural land reserve.

After testifying about police electronic eavesdropping in his office, Nielsen denied ever being offered money for his services. He said he was never approached by either of the accused to breach the trust of his office, and denied ever meeting or talking to Holme.

Nielsen said that although he was chairman of the agricultural land use committee, it would have been impossible for him to act on his own to try to have farmland removed from the reserve.

Earthquake shakes San Francisco area

Times News Services

SAN FRANCISCO — A strong earthquake, centered east of San Francisco near a nuclear weapons research laboratory, shook a large area of Northern California today.

The quake caused some damage and widespread alarm. There were reports of minor injuries from several cities.

The Berkeley Seismographic Station said the quake, which occurred at 11 a.m. PST (2 p.m. EST) and lasted about 20 seconds, registered 5.8 on the Richter scale and was centred 48 kilometres southeast of Berkeley near Livermore.

In Livermore, which is near the Calaveras fault, there were reports of a half-dozen injuries, minor damage to some buildings, gas leaks at two schools and some disruption of telephone service. Officials at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, where nuclear research is performed, said there was no damage to the reactor. Some buildings were evacuated.

In Stockton, authorities reported some cracked buildings.

An earthquake that measured 5.9 on the Richter scale hit San Francisco last Aug. 6. That quake, centred near Hollister, was one of the strongest since the 1906 earthquake that levelled much of San Francisco.

The earthquake of 1906 has been estimated at 7.9 on the Richter scale.

Air rates up 5 to 13%

GENEVA (UPI) — World airlines agreed today to raise passenger fares and freight rates by between 5 and 13 per cent to compensate for the latest round of oil price increases, the International Air Transport Association said.

The new rates, which vary depending on route, geographic location and type of ticket, are subject to government approval.

About 120 cost experts from 60 major airlines formulated increases of between 5 and 10 per cent for passenger fares to be effective April 1, and between 6 and 13 per cent for cargo rates effective March 1.

On routes to and from the United States and Europe, passenger fares will go up by an average of 10 per cent, with a plus-or-minus figure of 2 per cent for airlines to use at their own discretion. Cargo rates on these routes will rise a flat 12 per cent.

On Europe-Africa routes increases will be between 8 and 9 per cent on passenger fares, and 10 per cent on freight rates. Canada-Europe passenger fares will increase by 8 per cent and cargo rates by 13 per cent.

"There is no simple across-the-board figure, and specific fares and rates in national currency selling prices will be announced by the individual carriers, after processing and the necessary government approvals," an IATA spokesman said.

Further complicating the situation was the difference of fuel prices in various areas of the world.

"Recognizing that the impact of rising fuel costs varies in different regions of the world, the airlines have negotiated a range of area and sub-area percentages," the spokesman said.

Gold going up

LONDON (AP) — Gold resumed its upward surge today, reaching $717 U.S. — $831 Canadian — a troy ounce at the afternoon fixing price in London after closing at $692.50 in London on Wednesday. The morning fixing price in London was $712. The U.S. dollar was little changed.

Shaky peace for BCR

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Railway had the way cleared Wednesday night to get its seven unions back on the tracks today.

The return to normal operations was made possible when the B.C. Labor Relations board ordered a handful of dissident trainmen to remove pickets they had set up earlier in the day at the railway's main North Vancouver yard and at the Squamish terminal north of here.

The trainmen were seeking reinstatement of an overtime pay formula, not included in the contract proposal announced last Friday by Labor Minister Jack Heinrich after the breakdown of negotiations between the Crown-owned railway and the seven-unit Joint Council of Railway Unions.

The council agreed at that time to have its members return to work while a ratification vote was taken. The return was short-lived, however, as the 450-member United Transportation Union refused to go back during the weekend until a poll of members was taken.

That vote showed most opposed continuing the strike.

The railway then geared up for a Wednesday morning start up, but about 10 dissident UTA members picketed, partly hampering the resumption of service.

The railway applied to the board for a cease-and-desist order under the bargaining-in-bad-faith section of the province's labor code.

Heinrich said the pickets represented a "disgruntled few" of the railway's 2,200 employees.

He said a large majority want to work and are prepared to accept his settlement.

Drug overdoses down? Officials can't agree

Officials of Victoria's two major hospitals say there has been a marked reduction in the number of people admitted for treatment of drug overdose.

But the provincial Poison Control Centre in Vancouver disputes the hospitals' figures and says the problem is as bad as it has ever been and possibly even worse.

The centre, based in St. Paul's Hospital in Vancouver, suggests the decline is imaginary and nothing more than a statistical error.

"We have found some hospitals such as Victoria General are not reporting all the overdose cases they are handling," a spokesman for the centre said Wednesday.

The provincial department of vital statistics agrees.

"It's been a continuing problem," a statistician said. "We aren't getting all the figures and the VGH, as large as it is, has an effect on the total picture."

The Victoria Crisis Centre also reports there has been no dramatic change in the number of calls it has been receiving.

A spokesman for VGH reports drug overdose admissions dropped from an average of 55 a month for the first six months of 1977 to 38 a month for the same period last year.

At RJH the average fell from 63 a month in 1977 to an average of 40 a month for the period April to December last year.

No one seems to know the reason for the decline which has come as a surprise to hospital officials.

"I don't know if people are learning to cope better at home or what's happening," one emergency room nurse said.

Said Keith Anderson, head of social services at VGH:

"All we can do is speculate. It could be the agencies are doing a better job picking up potential overdose cases. Or maybe people are becoming more inclined to go to the detoxification centre rather than the hospital for help."

Anderson wonders also if changes in VGH's classification system may account for the drop.

Possibly, he said, what was once considered a drug overdose is now being statistically recorded as something else.

The poison centre said there is no indication of a decline in overdoses anywhere in the province — including the Victoria area.

"We don't feel the numbers are dropping," the spokesman said. "If anything the number of poisonings seem to be climbing each year."

The Crisis Centre handled an average of 856 calls dring the first six months of 1977; there were 909 calls for the same period last year.

Anderson said the majority of drug overdoses appear to be deliberate and about a third of the victims are under 20 years of age. Generally there are more women than men.

The number of cases involving elderly people has also grown in recent years, an indication to Anderson that more and more senior citizens are feeling isolated, lonely and are losing a sense of worth or usefulness to their lives.

An emergency room nurse at RJH said she hadn't seen a street drug overdose for two or three years, even though the Greater Victoria police drug unit has noted tranquilizers, uppers and downers are becoming more widely used in the drug sub-culture.

Keep out of Persian Gulf: Carter Doctrine

the president actually announced for all to hear that the United States regards nearly the whole world as its sphere of vital interests without being interested in the least how the countries which his administration intends to include in this sphere will react to this."

Carter's warning, sounding much like President James Monroe's 1823 demand that European colonial powers leave the New World alone, drew a round of applause from the senators and representatives.

In the face of the Soviet Union's intervention in Afghanistan and the anti-Americanism in Iran, foreign affairs dominated Carter's message right from the start.

"As we meet tonight, it was never been more clear that the state of our union depends on the state of the world," said the president.

Giving the Kremlin a taste of its own propaganda rhetoric, Carter accused the Soviet Union of seeking "colonial conquest" in defiance of the rest of the world.

"The Soviet Union must realize that its decision to use military force in Afghanistan will be costly to every political and economic relationship it values," he said.

Carter, who received warm applause during and at the end of his speech, hinted that he expects a prolonged superpower confrontation similar to the long-drawn-out Cold War conflict that followed the Second World War.

Carter appealed to Congress for "clear and quick passage" of a new charter defining the authority and accountability of America's intelligence agencies.

"We will guarantee that abuses will not recur, but we must remove unwarranted restraints on our ability to collect intelligence and to tighten our controls on sensitive intelligence information," he said.

Carter said the United States "will never rest" until the 50 American captives at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran are freed. "If the American hostages are harmed, a severe price will be paid," he warned.

But the president said he would try to persuade Iran's leaders that "the real danger to their nation" comes not from the United States but from the Soviet Union.

Carter reaffirmed his previous support for human rights, detente and SALT, but such issues took a back seat to his calls for a strong America capable of containing the Kremlin.

In a related development, British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington announced today a tough package of anti-Soviet measures to protest Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan. They include suspension of high-level and ministerial contacts.

The British government also expressed full support for the main U.S. goals in the Afghan crisis as defined by Carter.

Other moves announced by Carrington in Parliament include cancellation of military exchanges between Britain and the Soviet Union and an increase in the number of broadcasts beamed into the Soviet Union and Afghanistan by the British Broadcasting Corp.

But Carrington said: "I don't think the situation at the moment makes it necessary to re-introduce conscription or anything of that kind." Britain abolished military conscription in 1960 and now relies entirely on volunteers to man its forces.

Khomeini's illness slight heart trouble

United Press International

Ayatollah Khomeini, hospitalized with heart trouble, told the Iranian people from his sickbed today his condition was "not bad" and urged them to vote in Friday's presidential election. Iran's revolutionary guard was placed on alert until the voting ends.

In a recorded message broadcast to the nation by Tehran radio and monitored by BBC in London, Khomeini said: "As far as my condition is concerned, I am — praise be to God — not bad."

Khomeini was taken to Tehran's Heart Diseases Hospital from his headquarters in Qom Wednesday and confined to bed with "slight heart trouble," capping two weeks of seclusion because of fatigue and overwork.

"There is no cause for worry," the report said.

Tehran radio said the heart specialists treating Khomeini told the official Pars new agency this afternoon that Khomeini's conditon was so good that he may be transferred out of the special care unit to the ordinary heart treatment unit soon.

Meanwhile, Panama says it will consider a request from Iran to extradite the deposed shah but denied reports from Tehran the deposed monarch had been arrested.

In a telegram sent Wednesday to the Iranian Revolutionary Council, President Aristides Royos said, "Mr. Mohammed Reza Pahlavi remains under the care of Panamanian security authorities."

Presidential spokesman Boris Moreno said the telegram was in response to a provisional arrest request by the Islamic government received earlier this month.

Asked for a clarification of Royo's telegram, Moreno said it meant that the ousted ruler "is not under arrest."

"The Shah is under the protection of the Panamanian government but, I repeat, not under arrest. He continues to lead a normal life on Contadora Island. Today he walked his dogs while Empress Farah played a game of tennis," he said.

N.Z. expels Soviet envoy

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (Reuter) — New Zealand announced today it is expelling the Soviet ambassador because he personally helped to transfer funds from Moscow to a domestic political party.

The move came two days after the government said it was expelling the representative of the Soviet Novosti press agency as a protest against Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Prime Minister Robert Muldoon said the ambassador's expulsion has nothing to do with the Afghan issue.

He said after a special cabinet meeting that the government has evidence that Ambassador Ysevolod Sofinsky was personally involved in the transfer of Soviet money to the Moscow-aligned Socialist Unity party.

New Zealand is the third country in the last week to have become embroiled in scandals over Soviet activities.

Three Soviet embassy officials have been ordered out of Canada in the second Soviet spy scandal there in two years, and in Tokyo the Japanese defence agency was stung by the discovery of a Soviet spy ring in its headquarters.

Lawyer to conduct inquiry

The director of civil law for the attorney-general's ministry, has been named by deputy attorney-general Dick Vogel to make inquiries into the controversy surrounding the Eckardt royal commission on electoral reform.

Norman Prelypchan, a lawyer, began an informal inquiry this week, talking to people involved and getting written statements.

News reports said Eckardt's interim report on electoral boundaries was altered, although the allegations were denied by Eckardt, Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe and Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy.

the weather

Cold dry air moved into northern regions of the province overnight with skies clearing in most sections. Southern regions were generally cloudy with a few snowflurries in the interior. A high pressure area is forecast today and Friday. Clouds will gradually clear along the coast but persist in some sections of the interior. Much colder air will gradually work southward over the next few days, forcing temperatures well below seasonable normals over northern regions.

Joe's better side

TORONTO — The People's Airline chartered DC-9 blunders through the black night's sky over Manitoba as that familiar airline gravel-voice comes on to advise us that the entire lighting system at Winnipeg Airport has gone out.

"This time Adrian Lang has gone too far," comes the shout from the back of the media pack as the fresh-faced Tory Dixieland band, surrounded as usual by the lively Quebec press, tries to pump some adrenalin into the depressed atmosphere.

The Wasp scribes stand in the aisle interviewing one another, a time-worn and useful journalistic tradition.

Joe Clark sits alone in the front, his angst buried in one of the spy-thrillers he loves, John Le Carre's best-selling Smiley's People.

When you are down 20 points in every poll ever invented, an escapist book is probably the best solution.

The man who will be prime minister for less than a month is in his Perry Como cardigan, silk tie and the usual subdued attentiveness that he accords a private interview.

What would he do differently if he could do it all over again? No, it wasn't necessarily a mistake to delay so long calling Parliament, a failure (I press him) to indicate even symbolically that he had a grip on the country.

The mistake, he said, is that he and his ministers didn't get out and round the country in that long hiatus from May 22 to the autumn: "We could have done both."

One of the anomalies of politics is that the electorate never sees the better side of such politicians as Clark who in private (like Stanfield) comes across as thoughtful, pensive and fairly frank — an image he nervously cannot project in public. In the age of image, TV is like a merciless X-Ray, exposing lack of confidence. Did he in fact want to be defeated that celebrated Dec. 13 night? No, he confesses, he thought right up until that moment when the Liberal MPs filed in that they would step back from the brink.

While he maintains, for the record, that there is still an election to be won, our conversation inevitably takes on the air of history revisited, a sad discussion of something that has passed. Ball game over.

Prominent in the post-mortems of Dec. 13 has been the theory that the wily Allan MacEachen, Liberal house leader, suspected the Tories were planning an ambush quick election in the new year before the Grits could get their March leadership convention out of the way.

Clark maintained he wouldn't have jumped the Liberals, that he was thinking of the fall — emboldened by a full legislative record. MacEachen, he feels, was certainly fearful of the Tories getting their feet under themselves.

I wanted, says Clark, "a quiver-full of accomplishments" before going to the people. MacEachen knew that. He stopped it.

Charter flight 89 thunders east across the Canadian Shield carrying the boy from High River to Toronto, communications and style capital of the country, the city that has determined already that the election is over, finished, dead.

He defied the odds for seven months, but the prevailing fashions from the New York of the north caught up with him and did him in. Pierre Trudeau doesn't know what a Perry Como sweater is, let alone a Perry Como.

What, I wonder, does one do on one's pillow when down 20 points in the polls?

"What do I do? I sleep." He sleeps, he says the sleep of the content, aware of what he cannot control.

While Bill Davis of Ontario, the reluctant supporter, is finally coming out with a public statement for Clark, what about the shy Peter Lougheed, who has fled to Switzerland?

"I think Peter is wise to stay away."

You mean, like the Shah in Panama?

"Those are your words, not mine."

Fat Man may have made last holdup

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police here and in suburban Burnaby hope they have finally caught up with The Fat Man, a robber who has been the scourge of local banks for the last few years.

A 32-year-old man has been charged with five bank robberies involving $15,000 during a six-year period.

The holdups are among 26 bank robberies that netted about $190,000 between 1973 and 1979 and involved a stout suspect known to police as The Fat Man.

The suspect worked alone, wore sunglasses and carried a briefcase and handgun.

Neil John McGlynn of North Vancouver is accused of a $2,376 holdup Dec. 28, 1973, a $2,040 robbery Feb. 4, 1974, and a $3,250 holdup June 3, 1974 — all at the same south Vancouver branch of the Bank of Montreal. He is also accused of a $2,400 robbery Nov. 3, 1975, at a Toronto Dominion Bank branch in south Vancouver and a $5,500 armed holdup Dec. 10, 1979, at a Toronto Dominion branch in Burnaby.

McGlynn was charged after detectives checked a description of a suspect in the Burnaby robbery.

Released on his own recognizance to appear April 18 to face the Burnaby charge, he was arrested by city police Tuesday at his North Vancouver residence.

The Fat Man escaped with hauls as big as $13,000 and as small as $1,400. He usually struck a suburban bank when there were few customers and disappeared on foot with uncanny speed.

The Fat Man was suspected of spending part of his loot on vacations about once a year. After a lull of a couple of months he would turn up at his next bank job sporting a deep tan.

Airline ignored lesson: pilot

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — The crash of a Grumman Goose that killed seven men last Aug. 30 might have been prevented if Trans Provincial Airline had learned from the near-crash of another of its Grumman planes, an inquest jury has been told.

Lawrence Veitch, a former pilot with Trans Provincial, testified that a company Grumman Goose he was flying in January, 1977, almost crashed when it ran out of fuel because a sump valve in one of the two fuel tanks was closed.

"It just dropped like a stone," Veitch said. "You've only got a few seconds . . . luckily I was over water and managed to land in the water.

"A close call is definitely an understatement."

The coroner's jury recommended Tuesday that all valves not used in flight be lock-wired in an in-flight position to guard against such accidents.

Company check pilot Gene Storey told the inquest that following Veitch's near-crash, Trans Provincial considered lock-wiring the valves, but did not do so. He said that since the Aug. 30 crash, all valves have been lock-wired open.

The jury also recommended that all fuel gauges should be on the control panel directly in front of the pilot, and a warning light be installed to warn pilots when fuel is low.

Fuel gauges on the Grumman Goose are on the right and left walls of the cockpit and have no warning lights.

Seven men including the pilot were killed and three critically injured Aug. 30 when the Grumman Goose on a flight from Kitsault, in northern B.C., crashed into a power line corridor about 2.5 kilometres northeast of Digby Island airport, which serves Prince Rupert.

Testimony indicated the crash occurred after the valve which controls the flow of fuel from the left-hand fuel tank jammed shut, effectively halving the available fuel.

Victim turned away, parents sue PWA

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vernon family is suing Pacific Western Airlines for "damages, pain and suffering and loss of expenses" because it failed to fly a boy who needed medical treatment to Vancouver, their lawyer, Paul Danyliu, said Wednesday.

He filed the suit in Vernon County Court for Wayne and Myrne Phillips on behalf of their 10-year old son Keith. The suit seeks damages for PWA's refusal to fly Keith to Vancouver for emergency medical treatment last month because the airline was booked up, Danyliu said.

Keith's eye was injured when a black-light bulb exploded in his bedroom, sending glass shards into his eye. Several weeks after the accident, his Vernon doctor told the Phillips their son should go to Vancouver immediately for treatment.

If successful, the suit will set a standard for industry responsibility, Danyliu said.

"We are asking the courts to decide whether or not a public carrier which enjoys a monopoly situation has a responsibility, a legal duty to provide transportation in emergency situations."

PWA is the sole regularly-scheduled airline flying to Vancouver from the Vernon area. Because PWA did not arrange seating for him, the Phillips drove Keith to Vancouver in a 500-kilometre ride that took 14 hours.

After the incident, PWA officials wrote the Phillips that, while their agent was correct in saying the plane was full, the airline usually makes an effort to arrange transportation in emergency cases.

The Phillips are also suing the bulb's manufacturer, Danyliu said.

Second thoughts save five

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Second thoughts by the cold sober light of day saved five men from jail on theft charges.

Provincial Court Judge George Stewart was told the five had been drinking at the home of a loan company's assistant manager and learned he had failed to make the day's cash deposit.

When the five left the drinking party, one of the men broke into the assistant manager's truck and took the $1,367.33 cash deposit, $5,480.09 in cheques and 40 Loto Canada tickets worth $10 each. The five divided the cash equally, and threw the cheques and tickets into the Nechako River.

But the next day one of the five went around and collected the cash from the others, less $200 which had been spent, and then contacted police.

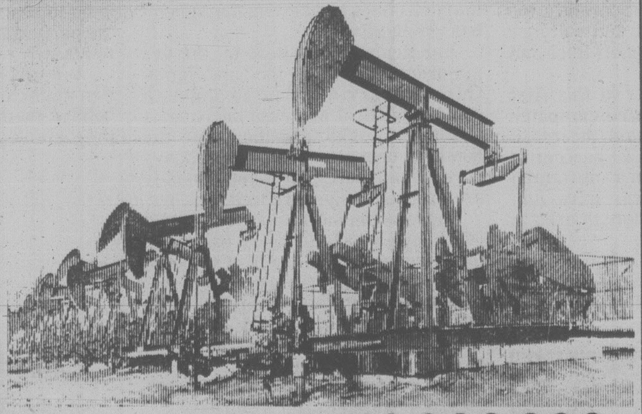
Steven Graham, Norman Okkerse, Allen Okkerse and Kevin Schmidt were given sentences ranging from a year's conditional discharge to two years probation. A charge of theft was stayed against a fifth person.

$879,000,000

THAT'S WHAT IMPERIAL INVESTED IN CANADA IN 1979... A LOT MORE THAN ITS PROFITS. HERE'S WHERE SOME OF THE MONEY WENT:

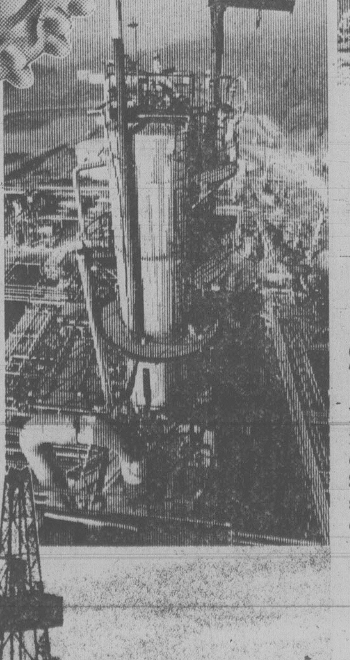
$10,000

That's what one diamond drill bit costs. It may last only a few hours in hard rock. Expensive? Yes. And a part of Imperial's conventional energy exploration investment of $470,000,000 in 1979.



$43,000,000

Getting oil out of the sands of Cold Lake, Alberta, is one of the most important energy projects of this century. The $43,000,000 spent in 1979 is only part of this $7 billion project.

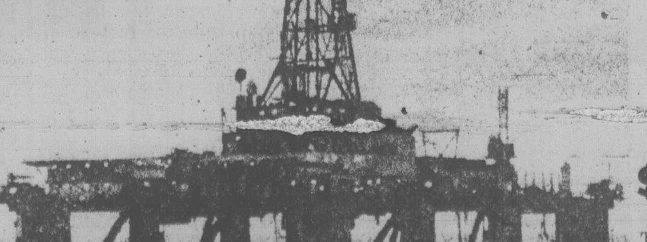


$10,000,000

Modifying Imperial's Dartmouth refinery to handle heavier crude oil cost $10,000,000 in 1979 – part of a $60,000,000 investment. The results will be a more flexible supply of oil for Canada's Atlantic provinces.

$191,000,000

Continued development drilling and expenditures to squeeze more oil and gas fro[illegible] wells – [illegible] these are technically complex and very expensive. Additional oil from mature wells can be as significant as a new discovery.



$185,000

That's how much it cost each day to run an off shore drilling rig.

When you think new energy, think billions.

Imperial is investing heavily in Canada to help this country become energy self-sufficient.

Over the next decade, our investments could total $15 billion. But perhaps the most striking figure of all is the $300,000,000 Imperial had to borrow last year to meet energy investment commitments.

When you hear about oil company profits, we hope you will remember oil company investments.

Who's the best choice?

The Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce doubtless has the best of intentions when it proposes taking over the job of economic development for the whole Capital Region.

Moreover, the Chamber would have some real advantages if the regional board were to award it the job. Its enthusiasm for the city and the economy cannot be underestimated, and among its directors it has a pool of valuable expertise in nearly all phases of Victoria industry.

All the same, the regional board should ask a few careful questions of the Chamber before it hands over $50,000 of the taxpayers' money to the group.

The first is whether the Chamber has the necessary expertise in research and the necessary data bank to provide the best possible information for businessmen investigating Victoria as a possible plant site. The Chamber proposes to hire a research officer (at an annual salary of $15,000) to accumulate information for questioners, but it seems his job will mainly be to co-ordinate information already available from various sources. In many cases, it seems, that may not be enough.

The question is particularly ironic because it is the regional board itself which has the largest data bank of economic information about Victoria. The data, however, remains hidden in the bowels of the CRD computer, and sometimes a fair amount of work is needed to sort it out.

The second question is whether the Chamber will be able to hold its gung-ho enthusiasm in check enough to send out fair and unbiased information to inquirers. The recent controversy between the Chamber and the public library when the Chamber accused the library of sending out too much "bad news" to potential settlers is a case in point.

Businessmen thinking of changing location do not need many flowery descriptions Victoria's wonders. They need cold, hard facts, and if their industry really isn't suitable for an Island location, they need the facts that will show them that too. If the Chamber gets carried away with sending out only the good news, it will soon lose its credibility in the national business community.

The third question is whether the Chamber is perceived as having enough interest in and knowledge of the entire Capital Region to stimulate develement from Sooke to Sidney. Fairly or unfairly, the Chamber is often pereceived as being representative mainly of downtown business. If, as a result, rivalries and jealousies develop among the municipalities and electoral areas, the whole idea of regional economic development can fall apart.

Last, there is a simple matter of principle: should any one group get a $50,000 from government without the use of some type of tendering process? The CRD would be best off, if it decides to contract out its economic development function, to call for tenders.

If the Chamber can answer questions about its proposal successfully and if its bid is the best that comes in, the board can then offer it the contract.

A fitting honor

All British Columbians should join in support of a proposal to have a coastal Haida village designated a World Cultural Site by the United Nations.

The village is Ninstints, located on Anthony Island in the Queen Charlottes. It was abandoned by the Haidas before 1898 but still contains the largest standing collection of totem poles on the Pacific coast, longhouses, and a large number of old native plank houses.

The suggestion for the designation is coming through Parks Canada and the federal Museum of Man. It would be the first World Cultural Site to honor a living North American Indian culture.

Parks Canada staff promise that designation would never mean Ninstints would be turned into any sort of commercial tourist attraction. Indeed, if the Haida so chose, they could ask that the public not be allowed into the area. The Indians themselves would be allowed to continue their traditional activities of fishing, hunting and trapping.

Some restoration might be undertaken, but "a Disneyland atmosphere will never be allowed to occur," said one Parks Canada official.

All indications are that B.C. has much to gain and little to lose from encouraging the designation. It would be a fitting tribute for the native people who have contributed so much to B.C.'s culture, and an honor in which the entire province can share.

The muffled myths of Iowa

WASHINGTON — The Iowa voters have not "settled" anything, but as is customary in that part of the country, they have separated the wheat from the chaff, and destroyed some favorite American political myths and illusions in the process.

The first of these is that the American people vote for their selfish special interests rather than for the national interest as defined by the president or anybody else. They were invited to oppose the president and his Soviet grain embargo, but they didn't do so in Iowa.

They knocked off some other myths along the way. The Imperial Presidency may be gone, but in a time of troubles overseas, the president remains the principal rallying symbol of our political life. He may be absent, he may be inconsistent, he may even be wrong in his estimate of the crisis, but if he appeals for help in the name of the Republic, nothing is likely to prevail against him.

Kennedy magic

Then there was the Camelot myth — of a nation dreaming of its youth — but the Kennedy magic has now vanished. Not Kennedy himself. He was badly wounded in Iowa, but he will be around for a long time, and stripped of the legend, he may now get ready for the future rather than relying on the past.

Reagan destroyed the myth that absence makes the heart grow fonder.

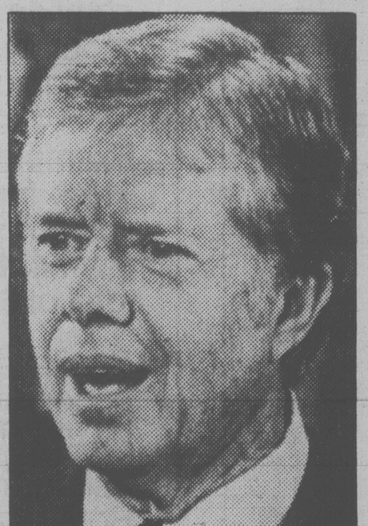
He should have known from his old 'B'-movie scripts that you either woo the girl or lose her, but he spent his time reading his clippings and riding his horses in California, and lost out to the stranger from Texas.

The old Leo Durocher myth that "nice guys finish last" had a mixed reception in Iowa. George Bush, the Connecticut Yankee from Texas, puts you in mind of Sens. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky, Clifford Case of New Jersey, and Mac Mathias of Maryland, all nice guys who didn't quite make it. But Bush is now definitely in the race and for the time being is Reagan's principal challenger, having swamped both Howard Baker of Tennessee, and John Anderson of Illinois, the nicest man in the race.

There was a vague myth about John Connally for a while. He has the sort of face made for presidential postage stamps and he rattles the chandeliers when he talks. The notion was that once he got on the stump with his conservative principles and combative stance he would seem just the man to make the Russians pay attention. But he was apparently too oily and noisy for Iowa, and will now have to count on knocking off Bush and Reagan in Texas.

The one clear winner in this first real test of the presidential campaign was Carter. Kennedy said the president would have to win 50 percent of the vote in order to claim a substantial victory. The late returns gave him almost 60 percent, and more than a 2 to 1 margin over Kennedy.

Equally important, his major opponent in the Republican Party, as judged by the popularity polls, was Reagan, and Reagan has clearly lost ground to Bush, who as a newcomer, is not widely regarded as the sort of candidate who can defeat the president.



JIMMY CARTER
. . . clear edge over Kennedy

For one thing, Carter has moved closer to the conservative right on both domestic and foreign policy issues, and while this has cost him some support among labor, blacks and liberals in general, he has probably gained more on the right than he has lost on the left.

His opponents are consoling themselves with the thought that foreign policy issues gave Carter his main advantage in Iowa, but the tension with the Soviet Union over Afghanistan and the Middle East in general is likely to persist all through the primary elections and beyond the November voting as well.

For Kennedy and Reagan, the two major losers in Iowa, the New Hampshire primary election next month could be critical and even decisive. A loss there would send them into the Southern primaries with a very heavy burden, and there Carter and Connally are expected to do very well.

Perhaps the most important aspect of the Iowa vote has been its exhilarating effect on Carter and his campaign organization. They were almost in dispair last autumn, charged with poor leadership and a bungled economy. The crises in Afghanistan and Iran have changed all that, at least in the public mind, and the Iowa vote has clearly restored Carter's spirits.

He interprets his victory in Iowa as a vote of confidence in his leadership, and while his managers were inclined even after Kennedy's faltering start to concede that the president would probably lose in the New England primaries, now they are talking cautiously about beating Kennedy in New Hampshire and knocking him out of the race before the industrial state elections later in the spring.

As events have been mainly responsible for the change in Carter's fortunes, however, so another unforeseen turn of affairs at home or overseas could transform the race once more.

Economic issues

What the Carter people have feared is a major campaign in the populous states from New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Michigan to California on the inflation, and the decline in the value of the dollar home and overseas.

Even on the economic front, however, the news is slightly better than it was at the turn of the year. While Carter's State of the Union Message and budget report will still be anticipating a large deficit, rather than the balanced budget he promised in his first term, the chances are that foreign affairs will still dominate the news and help Carter maintain his momentum.

It was Iowa that gave him his start in 1968 and recouped his losses in 1980. As Bob Strauss, his campaign manager says: "If Carter could parlay Iowa into the White House last time, think what he can do this time with the White House itself as a platform."

WALTER STEWART

'Team' approach is valid

OTTAWA — The federal election has produced its share of ironies, but none so rich and ripe as the spectacle of Pierre Elliott Trudeau standing on guard for self-effacement. It was a cynical gambit, but a worthwhile notion.

In the long, complex saga of the Great Television Debate, a drama as rich as Hamlet, with its own tagline — TV or not TV — the Liberal leader began by insisting on his duty to share the spotlight with other party spokesmen. Instead of a head-to-head-to-head confrontation with Prime Minister Joe Clark and NDP leader Ed Broadbent, he wanted a series of debates among the leading lights of each political persuasion.

Love me, love my team, he said. It was a switch comparable to Lucrezia Borgia coming out for stomach pumps. For 11 years Trudeau stood alone; now he was to be primus inter pares — the first among equals.

Fallback position

That phase didn't last long. When the other parties wouldn't play, Trudeau went to his high-priority-fallback position. This was to insist that he be placed in the ring alone with Clark and Broadbent, free of the intervention of journalists, who had been expected to ask questions of the leaders, as they did in the 1979 debate.

When the networks insisted on at least one journalist being involved, Trudeau bowed out, and the debate collapsed again. Liberal Senator Keith Davey, an adept hand at spooning out applesauce, fumed that, "We wanted a head-to-head confrontation between the party leaders and we weren't going to get it."

A more straightforward explanation might have been that the Liberals believe themselves so far ahead that they aren't taking any chances that their Saran-wrapped candidate — see, but don't touch — might come unravelled on television and actually say something, thus breaking a campaign precedent.

The debate's collapse allowed all the parties to swell with just indignation, the Conservatives and NDP because Trudeau was a fraidy-cat, and the Liberals because, as Davey put it, "We wanted a debate, not a television show." (An interesting distinction; in a debate, there are no beer ads.)

Unfortunately, in the din of charge and counter-charge, an important point was lost, namely that Trudeau's original, or just-one-of-the-boys approach, represented an attempt to return to parliamentary tradition.

Western democracies, including our own, seem to have become besotted with the notion, borrowed from presidential politics, that all the world's ills can be cured by the election of a single take-charge leader.

He will not be measured by his ability to enlist the best and most disparate talents to produce an acceptable mix of policy (a capacity with both Clark and Trudeau demonstrably lack). He will instead be judged against the American image of lonely dominance at High Noon.

Gary Cooper will fix everything with his six-gun.

This ancient, sturdy notion got a modern fillup with the election in the United States of John F. Kennedy (whose own debate with Richard Nixon was credited, probably wrongly, with costing Nixon the presidency in 1960). Kennedy embodied the idea of superman-as-leader, the Golden One who would solve all problems, defeat all enemies, unsnarl all knots, and his tragic death added to the myth, which was never put to the test of long-term performance.

Leadership became the touchstone, and it meant, not (in the parliamentary tradition) a couple of hundred people trying to muddle their way through, but one dominant personality with a quiver of lightning-bolts. Thus Margaret Thatcher came to power in the United Kingdom not in spite of, but because of, her reputation as the Iron Maiden. Thus India reinstated Indira Ghandi; she may be a little corrupt and a little despotic, but by gum, she's tough.

In Canada, Trudeau who made "Charisma" into a household word, parlayed personal qualities, some of them attractive, some not so, into a leadership cult.

Cult victim

Trudeau's contempt for the House of Commons, for cabinet, for most of the cumbersome trappings of parliamentary democracy, was open and evident — and popular. In time, however, when it turned out that no single personal can, in fact, lift a nation on his shoulders, Trudeau became the victim of his own cult, and in much of the land, he became a hissing and a byword.

In this hastily improvised election, he turned, of necessity, back to the concept of teamwork — at least briefly — only to be attacked by Clark and Broadbent. He stood charged with deference, a rap he has been able to beat.

But Conservatives may want to ask themselves if they really want to invest all their faith in Joe Clark, the man who lost Jerusalem and found PetroCan. New Democrats may wonder if Ed Broadbent really wants to get into a personality contest with Trudeau, and Canadians in general may wonder if we didn't blow a chance to return to a more realistic approach to politics.

Asinine action

Of all the asinine actions by the beauracratic buffoons now controlling our every breath of life, the one by the B.C. Motor Carrier Commission takes the cake.

Just who in the devil are they to stop the convenient and inexpensive service by the little Convair Coach Lines? We, the great unwashed, are the ones who decide whether or not a bus line operates. We do it by our patronage! And, what is this nonsense about an enterprise not being 'allowed' to advertise their service? Is this another Russian province?

Do our supposed pro-private enterprise politicans support the actions of this commission? If not, they should prove it by firing them. One less of tens of thousands of useless commissions in this country would be a blessing and a tax-saving. Socreds take note: get that bus-line in operation again! You cannot afford the loss of support of even one person today. — B. J. Brown, 103 — 1025 Fairfield Road.

Keep bus line

What's happening to free enterprise?

Instead of cancelling Convair Coach Lines' licence to operate an "inessential" bus service to Vancouver Airport, the B.C. Motor Carrier Commission should congratulate the firm for having survived without subsidies or advertising.

Pacific Coach Lines claims "unfair competition"; yet their bus fare to Vancouver is only $5.60 as opposed to Convair's $14 charge for the shorter, but more convenient, run to the Vancouver Airport. Obviously hundreds of customers decided that Convair's convenient run was essential and well worth the higher fare.

To conserve energy we are urged to use buses. Why then cancel one bus service that has proved its viability? — Ruby A. Pearson, 2085 Avondale Road.

Keep Marguerite

Word has filtered east and south of the border about the impending retirement of the steamer Princess Marguerite. I feel this would be a bad mistake and a tremendous loss for Vancouver Island.

Here in the U.S. we have squandered a lot of our heritage by ruthlessly discarding countless remnants of our past. Always the reasoning has been economic obsolescence. All too often, though, it was shortsightedness and a lack of creativity that prevented these lost institutions from continuing to make an economic contribution.

The Princess Marguerite is not only a beautiful ship from the twilight of another era, but also she is clearly still serving an economically viable function, bringing tourists and their money to Victoria and the rest of the island as well.

I thoroughly enjoyed my Sunday round trip on her this past September, but more important, I recall the ship being heavily loaded in both directions. The queue for the return trip stretched at least a block down the street along Victoria's waterfront. I understand that patronage on the Princess was up considerably this past year, and that passengers were left on the dock at both Seattle and Victoria on the last day. With that kind of patronage, the Princess can hardly be an economic dinosaur.

I urge the B.C. government not to retire Princess Marguerite. It has maintained her beautifully, and a modern replacement, a la Washington State Ferries, could hardly have the appeal of the elegant old Princess. With a little effort, she can continue being a credit to your nation, and a tremendous economic and historic asset to Vancouver Island. — Mark L. Miller, Port Huron, Michigan.

Bark and growl

Oak Bay Ald. Peter Bunn, former school board chairman, has just indulged in his annual barking and growling at the current school board over so-called excessive expenditures.

Former trustee Bunn served 16 years on the board, and during that period Bunn slashed the budgets to such an extent that the Victoria school district now has the dubious distinction of having the fifth worst teacher/pupil ratio in the province, one of the lowest per pupil expenditures in the province, and a large number of demoralized teachers.

Educational services to our children have suffered greatly under the misguided enthusiasm for budget slashing by ex-trustee Bunn.

The present board now has the onerous but necessary task of trying to correct the destructive policies and mismanagement of the education system that has characterized the Victoria school board during the 16 Bunn years. — John Young, School Trustee, Greater Victoria School District.

No right

In his recent statements about abortion, Health Minister Rafe Mair is over-stepping his authority. He is jeopardizing the rights of women. He is also questioning the integrity of doctors in our city.

He says he is asking for a report. However, he is jumping to conclusions and stating policies before the study has been done and the report completed.

He says he is going to cut the abortion rate. He has no right to do this. Let me draw to his attention the World Health Organizaton definition of health which has been accepted by the Canadian Medical Association: "Health is a complete state of physical, mental and social well being, and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity."

The Canadian Criminal Code, Section 251 provides that a woman may be granted an abortion if a Therapeutic Abortion Committee certifies "that the continuation of the pregnancy would, or be likely to endanger the life or health of the woman."

There has been some suggestion in the media that Therapeutic Abortion Committees do not have enough time to properly review cases. Let me point out that each application is made by two doctors; a general practitioner and a gynecologist, both of whom examine the patient and both of whom certify that the pregnancy is endangering her health. These doctors have professional integrity that should not be discredited.

Mr. Mair is opposed to abortion. He and those who share his views may make that decision for themselves. He has no right, however, to impose his will on a woman who needs an abortion.

Let me remind you that if women cannot obtain abortions in B.C. hospitals they will look elsewhere. Those who have enough money will travel to another province or the United States. Some will have illegal abortions. Some will use a tube to force toxic fluids into their uterus. This may cause blood poisoning. Some will use a coathanger or a knitting needle to dislodge a fetus. This may cause serious hemorraging. Some of these women will arrive in our hospitals as emergency cases. Some will die.

We are angry at Mr. Mair's presumptuous conclusions, his threats to the medical community and his flagrant lack of concern for women. We want to see the statement withdrawn. — Shirley Nordstrom, President, Status of Women Action Group.

Open to question

Under the title "Pause and Reflect" one of your correspondents appears to condemn the Canadian people for the "way we treat our political leaders."

In particular, he goes on stating that all democratic leaders throughout the free world recognized Trudeau as a "great man." Certainly, in many countries our former PM was received with the dignity and honor extended to any head of state, but with no particular distinction and certainly not with the same admiration enjoyed by his predecessor, Lester Pearson.

That many of the social services demanded and obtained from the federal government during the Trudeau regime are not available in the United States, as Mr. A. J. R,. Ash says, is open to questioning.

The old age security (introduced by Mr. King in Canada) is received by American citizens over 65 and it is not taxable. Canadian seniors do pay income tax on their OAP and CPP (introduced by Lester Pearson). A recent attempt made by some American legislators to levy taxes on at least one-half on Old Age Security met with unanimous condemnation by the public and the media, and it is certain that the measure will never reach Congress.

It is true that Canadians enjoy Medicare, but in the U.S.A. patients who cannot afford to subscribe to various forms of medical insurance are under Medicaid and other assistance schemes which provide for partial or total help when patients, especially elderly, need hospitals or nursing homes.

Americans are also sheltered in low-cost housing and are granted other benefits such as food stamps, job training and so on.

It is true that we Canadians have been asking more and more from the government during the Trudeau regime, but we didn't ask for the introduction of the metric system, for the many task forces and make-believe jobs which have created more financial problems and solved none. — E. I. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

Historical merit

The Capital Theatre appears destined to follow the fate of most older buildings whose owners refuse to see the merit or economics in retaining old, soundly-built structures by either restoring or renovating them as part of newer developments. The Capital, besides being a theatre whose entrance and interior decoration rivals and in some instances surpasses that of the Royal, claims distinction in the on-again, off-again history of film in B.C.

In 1933, Kathleen Dunsmuir, aspiring actress and heiress to part of the James Dunsmuir legacy was persuaded by English expatriate Ken Bishop to finance and sustain a motion picture company, Commonwealth Productions Ltd. The grandiose and ill-fated scheme was to produce films using local scenery and talent for export to Great Britain.

On Dec. 14, 1933, a logging picture, The Crimson Paradise, featuring Kathleen Dunsmuir. It premiered at the Capital Theatre to what were termed 'kind' reviews. Theatre manager Ivan Ackery had bombarded Victoria with 20,000 leaflets proclaiming, "Come to the Premiere of the First All-Canadian Talking Picture made in Victoria." Premier Patullo and Victoria Mayor David Leeming attended the opening along even though the curtain rose at 11:00 p.m., after the regular show was over.

For the Capital manager, the screening of The Crimson Paradise was a triumph of sorts, regardless of the actual merits of the film. Famous Players Ltd., owners of the theatre, at first refused to show the film, considering it a money loser. Possibly also, they were not anxious to encourage any Canadian film production that would infringe on their market. Mr. Ackery prevailed and was allowed three days in the week before Christmas, traditionally the worst time of year for movie theatres. In those three days he made more money than any other theatre manager in Canada.

Commonwealth Productions has long since folded, Kathleen Dunsmuir's acting ability or lack of it remains unknown, as no copies of The Crimson Paradise are in existence. Mr. Ackery has been succeeded by other, less feisty managers.

It looks like the Capital is next, unless local authorities can convince head office that a theatre rooted in the history of the city, integral to its cityscape is more important than a complex more suited to Toronto or Vancouver. — Thomas R. Palfrey, 941 Meares Street.

Military airfields

I am writing a book on airfields, the title of which is to be Military Airfields of Lincolnshire and the East Midlands, and would like the help of your readers.

I am under contract from a large publisher and my brief is to cover the airfields in the English counties of Lincolnshire, Nottinghamshire, Leicestershire and Yorkshire, nos. 1-4-5 and 6 (RCAF) Groups. I would like to hear from anyone who can help me with the following:

1. Furnish any anecdotes of incidents and sorties, humorous or tragic.
2. Loan of all/any photographs of aircraft and of station/airfields.
3. Any documents that might be of interest.
4. Outline history of any of the airfields.

I am seeking the loan of any of the above with a view to possible use in the book. I shall acknowledge all letters and return photographs etc. after copies have been made. A permanent record is needed before the wartime stations that were home for so many Brave Young Men and served us so faithfully, pass into oblivion. — Bruce Barrymore Halpenny, P.O. Box 4, Newark, Notts. NG24 1Ae, England.

Gifts appreciated

On behalf of the veterans at the Memorial Pavilion who have no immediate families, we wish to thank the friends who made donations of money towards an extra parcel for these vets.

Also the following stores who were kind enough to give gifts for the same purpose: Woodward Stores, Eaton's, Woolco, Jubilee Pharmacy, McGill and Orme, Shoppers Drug Mart, Ex-Service Women's Legion 182, Victoria Taxi Company, Simpsons-Sears. — E. H. Mills, P. Pendleton, 210-1841 Oak Bay Avenue.

Not so confident

Some 23 years ago I found myself compelled to join the newspaper guild to keep my job at the Columbian. I had understood that as a department manager I was not required to join, but such proved to be not the case as my position was newly created and not covered by contract exclusions.

Despite a very flat wallet and a very new baby, I resigned. One factor in my decision was the predilection of such unions for voting funds to the CCF/NDP, over the objections of various capitive contributors.

Last month the NDP ran a series of ads throughout B.C. lecturing the other parties about morality in fund-raising and stating . . . "we depend on your individual donation and on donations that are democratically approved by members of our affiliated organizations . . ."

I would very much like to hear, on a confidential basis where required, from every other worker who opposes the NDP but is compelled to contribute dollars to them by his or her union.

The NDP ads goes on . . . "we're confident you'll agree that this is the way parties should be funded . . ."

Tightening the screws

By PETER REDDAWAY
The Observer

The pre-Olympic purge of Soviet dissidents is gathering pace. Bastions of dissent in Moscow, the Ukraine and the Baltic are coming under intense KGB pressure, as trials and arrests proliferate.

The test is whether Western protests will be determined enough — as they were during the last crackdown in 1977 — to compel the Soviet leaders to back off and bring the purge to an end.

The KGB has been hitting the provinces for months. Far from stopping political oppression when the trials of Orlov, Shcharansky and others ended in August, 1978, the authorities simply turned their attention away from Moscow to individuals and groups whose fate aroused less interest abroad.

Behind this smokescreen, no less than 90 trials have taken place since August, 1978 on which reliable information has reached the outside world.

Two hundred and three people have either been sentenced at these trials, or forcibly interned in mental hospitals without trial, or are now in pre-trial detention. This figure includes only those jailed as a result of the peaceful expression of their beliefs, and for a significant period. Excluded are a few cases of violent dissent and several hundred of imprisonment for a few months or less or of fining.

Beyond these cases, which mostly involve the court system, thousands of people have been interrogated in the last 16 months in connection with political cases, and nearly a thousand have had their homes searched by police.

Many have been dismissed from their jobs, threatened with arrest, subjected to KGB blackmail, forced into emigration, or assaulted by officially sponsored thugs.

About 500 Crimean Tartars have been forcibly evicted from their homes and deported from the Crimea.

These figures come from my review of the available documentation. The total must be higher — perhaps twice as high — as reports far from cover the entire country.

Of the 203 tried or otherwise imprisoned, 57 were exercising or promoting basic human rights; 55 were primarily defending the rights of the national minority to which they belong, and 91 were concerned with their rights as religious believers.

Among the latter, 42 are Baptists, 23 Adventists and 12 Russian Orthodox, with lesser numbers for Pentecostals, Jehovah's Witnesses and others.

The main KGB targets of recent weeks have been members of the Ukrainian Helsinki Group and key dissenters in Lithuania and Moscow. In the capital the following groups are among those who have suffered arrests or received serious warnings: the Moscow Helsinki Group, the "working commission" on political abuse of psychiatry, the Christian Committee to Defend Believers Rights, the religious philosophy seminar founded by Alexander Ogorodnikov and the Moscow group of non-conformist artists.

A further 50 well-chosen arrests could silence the majority, at least until after the Olympic Games and the subsequent Madrid conference to review the working of the Helsinki accords. Everything suggests that this is the minimum goal set by the Kremlin.

In January, 1977, the Soviet authorities were at a similar stage. However, just at that moment the new American President, Jimmy Carter, launched his human rights campaign, and Soviet leaders beat a hasty retreat with only 20 active dissidents arrested.

As a result, almost all the Helsinki and other groups survived.

Ironically, many Western commentators misread events and concluded that Carter's policy had been of doubtful value.

Nothing could be further from the truth. The Afghan invasion notwithstanding, the Soviet regime inherently craves international acceptance, and Western campaigns against increased oppression are bound — if strong and persistent — to have a large measure of success.

'All's bright' in the world of tanka

Balmy spring is at its height here —
The serene pond mirrors in grace drooping cherry trees by the pond
With frills of pink blossoms.

TOKYO — The 31-syllable tanka poem is by Emperor Hirohito and it was read aloud, intoned three times, to a select group at the Imperial Palace in Tokyo. The men wore morning coats and pinstripe trousers, the women for the most part were clad in formal black kimono. The 78-year-old monarch sat in state, nodding his head to the words.

The poems are far from memorable, the occasion is stiff and formal — but there is magic in the annual imperial poetry-reading held at the palace here every January.

It is a quintessential Japanese performance and nowhere else in the world is poetry an affair of state and also the hobby of millions.

The tanka, written in five lines of five, seven, five, seven and again seven syllables — the translation of the emperor's poem above by Kyodo News Agency gives only a gist — is a classical Japanese verse form that flourished from the ninth to the nineteenth centuries, spanning a milennium of imperial rule.

At the peak a thousand years ago it was "infused with melancholy," in the words of Prof. Donald Keene of Columbia University.

But today's mighty output of tanka — in terms of sheer volume — looks on the late-20th century with a diluted optimism and sense of striving that makes the Afghan crisis and the troubles in Iran seem to belong to another world.

Amateurs

Writing tanka is something any amateur can do, however excruciating the result; and there is a torrent of contemporary tanka published in specialist magazines for professionals, newspaper columns and thin tomes put out by businessmen's associations and by trade union organs.

The empress, who has pains in her hips, according to the Imperial Household, did not attend the tanka-reading ceremony, but her poem — probably submitted with the aid of a professional teacher attached to all members of the imperial family — reflected the approved note for the times:

All's bright in the sunshine on this vernal day in the palace garden with a variety of cherry blossoms in their glory.

The modern tanka has, in the hands of a few professional poets, a unique stature together with its cousin, the 17-syllable haiku.

Each year the Imperial Household appoints persons to choose a group of 10 poems to be read before the emperor. This year experts deciphered 30,723 entries written in black ink brush, to boil down their selections to tanka by 10 commoners.

Their choices appeared eclectic, where vocabulary was concerned. But theme — this year's chosen topic was "cherry" — and content were set beforehand and carefully screened. The tone was to be forthright and optimistic, though foreign words and even foreign names were allowed.

Mozart

Tamiko Matsuo, a 47-year-old piano teacher from Nagoya, stood with head bowed, a string of heavy pearls above her black Western-style dress, while her tanka starting with the word "Mozart" was chanted solo and then intoned by a group of six morning-coated men seated at a table in a hollow square facing the emperor. The work was inspired by the sight of blossoms after a rendering of Mozart.

The use of foreign words in official tanka was discouraged during the 1930s and during the Second World War, when the form was used to glorify the imperial family and Japan's civilizing mission, but the subsequent close alliance with the United States changed attitudes. The emperor's younger brother, Prince Mikasa, once wrote a laudatory poem [illegible]

The theme for next year's poetry party is "sound."

New York

The stock market responded to President Carter's State of the Union message with a broad advance today.

Analysts said Carter's declaration Wednesday night that the United States would use "any means necessary, including military force" to defend the Persian Gulf against any attack was welcomed on Wall Street.

Carter also proposed a resumption of Selective Service registration as a measure of preparedness should the need arise for mobilization of forces.

Brokers noted that the speech gave new impetus to recent speculation among investors that spending for defense and technological research might step up economic activity considerably in the next several years.

Among Canadian issues on the NYSE, Dome Mines rose 1⅜ to $56⅞, McIntyre Mines 1 to $66¾, Hudson Bay Mining ¾ to $29¾, Campbell Red Lake Mines ⅝ to $30½, Ashland Oil ⅝ to $41⅝ and Inco ⅜ to 27½.

TOKYO (AP) — Toyota Motor Sales Co., sales arm of Toyota Motor Co., said the company produced a record 2.99 million vehicles in 1979.

The was 4.9 per cent higher than the 2.85 million Toyota cars, trucks and buses produced in 1978, officials said.

The company also reported record exports of 1.38 million, vehicles, including 617,383 to the United States. U.S.-bound exports were up 8.3 per cent from 570,049 units in 1978. Over-all, Toyota exports were 5.5 per cent above 1978's 1.31 million units.

The figures did not include vehicles produced and shipped for assembly elsewhere. Production of vehicles for assembly elsewhere totaled 76,960 units last year, up from 72,960 units in 1978.

A spokesman for Toyota Motor Sales said brisk sales of new models and, sales promotion efforts, particularly in the Japanese market, helped boost the 1979 production figures.

Margin trade rate boosted

TORONTO (CP) — Concern over speculation in the stock market has prompted the Toronto Stock Exchange to raise its requirement for down payments on margin loans. The Montreal Stock Exchange is considering similar action.

Effective at the opening Wednesday, the margin rate at Toronto for listed stocks trading at $2.00 or more was increased to 60 per cent from 50 per cent. The requirement was established in a notice to members of the exchange Tuesday.

Margin loans are loans by stockbrokers to investors for stock purchases. As a precaution against undue speculation, stock exchanges specify investors can only borrow a certain percentage of the stocks' value.

The remainder must be paid in cash as a down payment, referred to as margin. The stockbroker holds the purchased stocks as collateral for the loan until the investor sells them.

The Capital Regional District is going through some strange twists and contortions over several important policies which make me wonder if anybody over there knows what he's doing.

Recent snafus over the Macaulay Point outfall, transit planning and development costs in the western community have badly embarrassed the board and created a large question mark about its efficiency.

The saga of the Macaulay Point outfall — is it broken, dislodged, misplaced or are people seeing things out there in Juan de Fuca strait? — continues with no end in sight.

Two and a half years ago the end of the outfall broke off but nothing was mentioned publicly until last month when sports fisherman Alex Webster wrote to the CRD complaining about toilet paper and bits of sewage on the surface.

In 1978, the CRD chairman and the head of the public works committee were told but in 1979 when new members took over these positions, they weren't told a thing about this rather significant development. The provincial Pollution Control Branch, which licensed the outfall, was still in the dark as of two weeks ago.

It's only a "minor" problem, says the current chairman, Jim Campbell.

The CRD has also tried to grapple with transit planning and come off the loser. After authorizing $60,000 last year for the job, CRD board members were presented recently with a nice "conceptual framework" but nothing resembling the plan for concrete service improvements in the western community they asked for originally.

The staff wanted another $12,000 to do that task. That raised a few eyebrows. So the job has been handed to the Urban Transit Authority, which is a black eye for the body which is supposed to assume responsibility for transit planning in a mere two months.

Worse, the UTA has promised to come up with a service plan in just six weeks. The CRD had almost twice as many months to do the job.

Third on the list of puzzling developments was the mysterious disappearance of $120 million, the figure attached just a month ago to a report on the future costs of population growth in the so-called western sector, Langford and Colwood.

That number, and an equally disturbing paragraph which said the area would be full up in a couple of years unless sewers were built, were quoted as gospel in December.

They convinced many people that substantial growth in the area was now impossibly expensive and, incidentally, that years of planning for the area were down the drain.

But the numbers were suddenly declared inoperative this month. The $120 million figure was just the result of quick addition on the spot, the planners said, and they retracted the report with its offending figures.

What did it actually say? The area could absorb "approximately 2,000 more persons over the next two to three years on septic tank fields . . . After that, no development is possible without a sewer system."

That seems unequivocal. But not to the planners who drafted the document, apparently. Now they have discovered all kinds of doubts which weren't apparent a few weeks ago.

"It seems quite clear 2,000 persons is not quite right. It could be 5,000 or even 8,000," said one planner.

Oh? Why didn't the report say so? And what's the new figure for development costs?

That rather significant item was never mentioned in the planners' hasty retreat earlier this month, and they still haven't said what it is.

One sure thing — it will be at least equal to the amount of credibility the CRD has lost in recent weeks.

It's lucky the CRD's mandate is restricted to transit, land-use planning and sewerage. Heaven help us if they ever got their hooks into something like social services.

It may be a bit unfair to blame the CRD staff. Besides coping with the usual uncertainties of attempting to plan a very uncertain future, they are buffeted by their political bosses on the board. Their ideas of what is proper have less to do with planning standards than with what is politically popular.

Accordingly, the staff has developed a protective habit of going its own way, sometimes ignoring the politicians it supposedly answers to. It doesn't conform to the political science theories of responsible government but in an organization as fragmented as the CRD, it was probably inevitable.

In this litany of fumbles, the staff has been caught out, but both groups must share the responsibility.

Maybe Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm was right. His original brainwave — outright abolition of regional districts — was not very elegant and probably wasn't workable in practice, but at least it would have prevented the kind of goofs that have plagued the CRD lately.

Follow Britain, task force told

Unification: mostly a flop

Unification of Canada's armed forces has failed to meet most of its goals and the Royal Canadian Navy, Canadian Army and Royal Canadian Air Force should be re-established as separate entities.

This was the thrust of the first brief presented at The Empress this morning to Defence Minister Allan McKinnon's task force reviewing unification.

The brief was presented by Lt.-Gen. Reg Lane (Rtd.) of Victoria, former deputy chief of NORAD, on behalf of the Federation of Military and United Services Institutes of Canada.

Among those assisting Lane were Brig.-Gen. Bill Howard of Calgary and Dr. Reg Roy, director of military studies at the University of Victoria.

The task force, headed by chairman George Fyffe of Ottawa, was told the federation represents more than 10,000 ex-officers and civilians.

Lane said the three services should be reinstated under the direction of a ministry organization modelled on Britain's defence ministry with three individual service chiefs coming under the direction of the Chief of Defence Staff.

"We further recommend the retention of common maintenance and service support elements and the telecommunications command at the present level," the brief said. "The level of division between operational responsibilities and general support obligations should be established after review."

The brief concluded: "To avoid a further disrupting cycle of major changes, a series of planned adjustments should be introduced progressively to bring about increased military effectiveness."

The federation said one of the most disturbing aspects of unification was the forcing of those policies on the cadet movement, which is directed more toward citizenship and leadership than military training.

Lane . . . even cadet movement hurt

"It (the cadet movement) was doing extremely well before unification with the pride in the individual uniform being a part of that success," the brief noted.

F.O. Willmore, who served with the Royal Artillery and Royal Canadian Artillery for 30 years, told the task force that if the Afghanistan situation leads to a world conflict Canadian forces would neither be able to repel a Russian invasion in Canada's north nor live up to Canada's commitment to her allies.

Calling for a return to the three services and three separate uniforms, Willmore said morale has been seriously impaired by the loss of identity and tradition and that, unless something is done, there will be nothing on which to build.

G.H. Hayes, speaking for the Naval Officers' Association of Vancouver Island, also said pride, identity and morale has suffered because of unification.

He said unification has resulted in too many chiefs and too few Indians.

"We understand that Canada has the most over-commanded forces in NATO," he said.

He said a plan for replacing Canada's aging fleet had been ready to be implemented in 1967-1968 but integration was implemented instead.

"Since that time, Canada has lost one aircraft carrier and its fighter squadron, one training cruiser and one training submarine, plus a seven-ship training squadron of frigates. In addition, only four of our remaining destroyers are less than 20 years old," he said.

Others presenting briefs at today's hearing were the Canadian Scottish Trustees, represented by G.M. Urquhart, and Brig.-Gen. L. Wylie, representing the Canadian Forces Communications and Electronics Association.

Development contract decision later

Chamber works free

The Capital Regional District Wednesday accepted the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce's offer to handle economic development affairs free of charge for the next 30 to 60 days.

This will allow time for the district to appoint an eight-member economic development commission which will recommend whether the economic development function should be contracted out to the chamber.

Chamber president Cedric Steele made a presentation to the board, suggesting a $65,000 budget, the biggest item being $42,400 for advertising, brochures and other promotions.

The proposal includes a "sunset clause" by which the chamber or the district could withdraw from the contract on 30 days' notice.

Saanich alderman John Mika and Sooke director Don Rittaler were opposed.

Rittaler said Sooke does not want to take part in the chamber project because it has its own economic development commission which receives provincial government funding.

Mika said the project would only work if it was truly a regional one.

"We have not achieved that position."

Victoria, Saanich, Esquimalt, Colwood, Langford, Metchosin and View Royal have agreed that economic development become a regional function.

Oak Bay has said it will only join if the project is put out to contract and an opting-out clause is included in the economic development bylaw. Sidney, North Saanich and Central Saanich want no part of it.

Before the resignation of former economic development commissioner Barry Mayhew, the work was funded jointly by the four core municipalities and the provincial government.

Sales tax hike eyed on transit

The Capital Regional District Wednesday asked Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm if the provincial sales tax can be bumped by a half per cent to fund transit authority deficits.

The last-minute surprise proposal came from Esquimalt council. Mayor Ken Hill said U.S. cities and other places use the sales tax to cover such costs.

Esquimalt is suggesting the sales tax be raised from the current four per cent to 4½ per cent.

The move came after 90 minutes of debate which began when transportation committee chairman, Mayor Norma Sealey of Sidney, moved that any firm decision on how public transit deficits will be financed be deferred until not later than Feb. 27.

Her motion eventually passed but not until Saanich mayor Mel Couvelier, a member of the provincially-appointed Urban Transport Authority, had voiced repeated opposition to further delay.

Under a provincial government edict the CRD is to take over public transit on April 1.

Couvelier said the board should immediately pass a bylaw that would levy a three-cents-per-gallon surcharge on gasoline and diesel fuel to cover the public transport deficit in 1980.

The government has stated gas surcharges, increases in hydro rates and property taxes can be used to cover the deficit.

"By failing to recognize a gas tax today we are increasing property taxes for our taxpayers for the rest of 1980," Couvelier said. "What we are really doing is agreeing that for 1980 the deficit will come out of property taxes."

Couvelier said the oil companies have stated they need three months' lead time to put the surcharge into effect but Mayor Sealey said she has had confirmation by phone that the oil companies and B.C. Hydro have done the preliminary work needed for the expected increases. She said she has no particular brief for increasing property taxes but it is less objectionable than the other two alternatives (gas and hydro increases).

She could see no reason why any firm decision should be made before she and regional board chairman Jim Campbell meet with Vander Zalm on Feb. 14.

City director Ald. Bob Wright objected strongly to increasing property taxes, saying there is a large percentage of older people living in the area whose pensions are not indexed.

"They're having a tough time feeding themselves. Everybody's eating at the dripping roast, municipalities, the CRD, schools, they're all eating at the carcass. We're going to look at a horrendous amount of money in future years," Wright said.

'Big League' care sought for children in hospitals

The first step will be taken next week toward setting up an association dedicated to improving the well-being of children in various Greater Victoria health care settings.

A meeting will be held next Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the medical lecture room of Royal Jubilee Hospital with the purpose of organizing a Victoria chapter of the Association for the Care of Children in Hospitals.

Sherry Pearson, a community health nurse, said the hope is that the association will be a mix of health professionals, parents and other interested parties.

"Pediatrics over here has been sort of asleep and I think it is time to wake up and join the big leagues," she said in an interview while outlining the reasons for the association.

There is a real need to provide more facilities for and attention to the needs of children in hospitals or other health-care settings, to develop day care centres and focus on chronic care for children, Pearson said.

Using hospitals as an example, she said children are often petrified when they have to be admitted and the facilities are often not geared to making their stay any easier.

"We have learned in the last 20 years that the side effects of hospitalization on children can be devastating and last a lifetime."

There is a need for therapists who can play with the children in such a way that they will express their feelings, she said. There is also a need for facilities which would allow parents to stay with their children in the hospital.

Pearson said now that the planning is under way for the new hospital on Helmcken Road, it is a good time for those interested in providing such facilties to make their voices heard.

Pearson said she doesn't want to be harsh with those working at Royal Jubilee Hospital or Victoria General because they are doing the best with what they have. But they need better facilties and more personnel, she added.

She said the new child care association would also be interested in promoting things like special wards for teenagers in hospitals and improving conditions on maternity wards.

"There are a lot of things that can be done, all it needs is some group to give a little push."

All those interested in taking part in an association that would provide that push are asked to attend the meeting next week, Pearson said.

There is a similar child care association in Vancouver and others in the U.S., Australia and New Zealand.

Gorge widening clears one hurdle

Victoria's advisory traffic subcommittee voted Wednesday to go ahead with the controversial Gorge Road street widening project.

But chairman Ald. John Cooper said it was a 5-4 vote (he abstained) and that he isn't yet completely convinced of the need to add an extra lane.

Before the matter comes back to the full traffic committee of city council in two weeks for ratification, Cooper said he plans to investigate further and still hopes it will be proved unnecessary.

When it was first made public last year, a dozen residents of Gorge between the B.C. Forest Products overpass and Balfour Street petitioned city hall to block the $528,000 proposal.

Adding a full left turn lane down the middle of Gorge would mean the removal of a number of ornamental trees and a strip of grassy boulevard on the north side.

Cooper said today that city council has not allocated funds for the project.

Doves to the left, hawks to the right

The Victoria Coalition for Disarmament is out to separate the doves from the hawks among candidates in the Feb. 18 federal election.

The group has invited all Greater Victoria candidates to a public meeting at the Friendship House, 1831 Fern, at 2 p.m. Jan. 31.

The candidates will be asked what they would do, if elected, to help bring about a more peaceful world. Specifically there are four questions:

Would they agree to work to remove nuclear missiles from Comox and other Canadian bases?

Would they agree to support cancellation of the $5 billion fighter plane contract?

Would they support a Peace Tax Fund so that conscientious objectors could have their tax money directed into peaceful undertakings rather than ones that are war-oriented.

Would they agree to limit Canadian arms sales to countries with good human rights records, according to Amnesty International?

The coalition is sponsored by the Society of Friends, Unitarian Church, United Nations Association, Victoria Labor Council, Victoria Peace Council, World Federalists Association, and various other church groups and committees.

City boxing reviving with Jaycees' support

Those wild punches thrown all over Memorial Arena in the So You Want To Fight series might have been too much for civic officials to allow to continue but the excitement generated by them is having its effects.

On local boxing, for example.

After almost a decade of being on the ropes, as it were, amateur boxing is promising to make a dramatic comeback here in the '80s.

With the days of the once-strong London Boxing Club and a host of other smaller groups long gone, only a handful of diehards have worked out in the city over recent years.

Late in 1976, the Victoria Athletic Association was formed and took over the LBC's boxing program and a further boost for the sport came in 1978 when Louis Bujdoso received the support of the Victoria Jaycees to form the Jaycee Boxing Club.

Now, thanks to the interest created by the ill-fated So You Want To Fight events, any Monday, Tuesday or Thursday evening you will find around 30 or so youngsters (and not such youngsters), proteges of Bujdoso and Mike Caird, working out in a basement gym in the Jaycee Hall on Quadra Street.

Caird, in fact, has only five of the more experienced fighters while Bujdoso has about 25 whose ages range from eight to 35 "or maybe even 40." There was even a teenage girl there the other night, not taking part in fisticuffs but working out nevertheless.

They all train solidly for two hours — first skipping and doing floor exercises, then out on the road for a one-mile run. Then it's some more exercises back in the gym followed by punchbag work, shadow boxing and sparring.

It's a tough evening's work but they all seem to enjoy it, even the young ones.

There already has been such a revival in interest that the old B.C. Diamond Belt championship tournament has been brought back after a lapse of several years and will be staged by the Jaycee Club for the first time in the Central Junior High School gymnasium Feb.8 and 9. The Diamond Belt was last staged on the Island some 18 years ago.

Caird will have two fighters — Gary Robinson (at 156 pounds) and Daniel O'Sullivan (139) — in the tournament while Bujdoso will have five — Tim Johnson (165), Robert Cozens (156), Perry Evans (147) and Larry Hitchmough and Lance Mitchell (both 139).

Robinson, who has had [illegible] fights, is one of the three most impressive young boxers to come out of the Victoria area in recent years. The others are Cliff Ballendine and Matt Montgomery.

In 1978, Robinson won a silver medal in the welterweight (147 pounds) division of the Canadian junior boxing championships and last year Ballendine was selected Junior Golden Boy.

Boxers from all over B.C., Alberta, Washington and Oregon will be here for the Diamond Belt contest which will feature bouts for intermediate open, senior novice and senior open fighters.

Bujdoso, who fought as a young man in Hungary before coming here in 1958, and Caird, who now is 38 and last fought in 1966, remember the old days fighting with London Boxing Club where they trained under Nick Lystar and later Harry Morris.

Today, there are boxing clubs in Nanaimo, Crofton and Campbell River but back then, says Mike, there were clubs in Esquimalt, Sidney, James Bay, Ladysmith and Chemainus.

"As well, the Victoria Fire Department had a club and the Army and Navy both had clubs," he explains. "In fact, we got most of our opposition from the forces."

That's all gone now but Lou says it's on the way back and he and Mike are grateful to the Jaycees for their support in reviving the sport.

To them, it's a great sport that a boy can start at any age and use his co-ordination to develop skills in timing and footwork.

"And there is no bodily harm to them, except a few knocks in sparring," Lou says. "And we don't let them spar until they're in shape and ready for it."

Both Mike and Lou are sure this big tournament the Jaycee Club is sponsoring and other club events to follow will bring out the fans and build up even higher the rekindled interest in boxing in Victoria.

"Around 3,000 people paid a lot of money to watch that So You Want To Fight series," Lou points out. "So there are a lot of boxing people in Victoria."

Spaghetti lovers support Hawks

Drawn partially by an offer of a free spaghetti feed, a record 10,127 fans turned out in Portland on Wednesday night to cheer the Winter Hawks to a 5-2 Western Hockey League victory over Victoria Cougars.

Incentive was provided by the Winter Hawks, who guaranteed a free spaghetti dinner to each fan if Portland won the game.

Bart Yachimec scored twice to lead victory.

After Brad Palmer's unassisted goal gave the Cougars a 1-0 first-priod lead, the Hawks warmed to the sellout crowd and scored three consecutive second-period goals.

Tim Tookey and Ed Cooper scored power-play goals in the first four minutes, and Yachimec counted his first marker at 18:11 while Portland was shorthanded.

Torrie Robertson closed the gap to 3-2 at 19:13 of the middle period but Yachimec beat Cougar goalie Grant Fuhr at 3:57 of the final period and Jim Benning counted at 6:10 to give the Hawks their third consecutive win over Victoria.

Hawks netminder Darrell May made 40 saves to gain his 20th win of the season while Fuhr stopped 42 shots in the wide-open game.

In other games, Billings Bighorns edged Seattle Breakers 5-4 and Regina Pats defeated Medicine Hat Tigers, 7-4.

Jeff Zilkie scored two shorthanded goals, one in the first and another in a goal-filled second period, as Billings edged Seattle.

Both teams scored three times in the second period.

Ron Flockhart scored two goals, one on the power play and one while short-handed to lead Regina to the win over Medicine Hat.

Meanwhile, in an exhibition game in Winnipeg, Anthony McMurchey scored three goals to lead New Westminster Bruins of the WHL to a 7-4 win over Fort Garry Blues of the Manitoba Junior Hockey League.

Almost 1,000 fans turned out to watch the exhibition game between the two clubs which have a player-exchange agreement.

Orest's suspension withdrawn by league

EDMONTON (CP) — A one-game suspension against Pittsburgh Penguin centre Orest Kindrachuk has been withdrawn, Brian O'Neill, executive vice-president of the National Hockey League, announced Wednesday.

The suspension was handed out after a bench-clearing brawl in Pittsburgh last Saturday between Penguins and and Edmonton Oilers.

Kindrachuk was identified as the first man off the bench in a second-period ruckus that led to 191 minutes in penalties.

O'Neill said a review of game films showed an Oiler was first off the bench. O'Neill refused to identify the player and said no action will be taken.

He also said he discussed the incident with the coaches and general managers of both teams Wednesday afternoon, just before a return bout between the two teams in the Edmonton Coliseum.

Kindrachuk did not play Wednesday. He had missed six games before the Saturday match with a hip injury; the injury continued to bother him.

NHL shelves realignment

Times News Services

Changes in the divisional alignment of the National Hockey League are inevitable — but things will stay as they are for at least another season, a poll conducted by a league committee indicates.

Dictating the status quo for the 1980-81 season is an agreement the league made with the four clubs which entered the NHL this season from the defunct World Hockey Association.

When they joined the NHL, Winnipeg Jets, Edmonton Oilers, Quebec Nordiques and Hartford Whalers were guaranteed a balanced schedule running through the 1980-81 campaign. As the schedule now dictates, each of the 21 NHL clubs play each other entry four times during the 80-game schedule.

The new entries sought the arrangement in order to ensure that their fans would get a chance to see the best teams and players twice a year. They didn't want the divisional rivalries of an unbalanced schedule which might keep a team like Montreal Canadiens out of their home rinks.

A poll of the 21 entries by an NHL committee studying realignment will be discussed next week when general managers from the teams meet in Florida. Chairman of the committee is Bill Torrey of New York Islanders.

The poll offered several realignment suggestions but none of them will go into effect next season because, due to the agreement with the new entries, it would take unanimous agreement by all clubs to implement the scheme.

But proposals brought forth through the committee poll might provide a preview of how the NHL will stack up for the 1981-82 season.

A Boston proposal submitted by Bruins' general manager Harry Sinden received the full support of five other teams.

It calls for two conferences and places the Bruins in a division with Hartford, Quebec, Montreal, Buffalo and Toronto. A second division in the same conference would be made up of the Islanders and Rangers from New York, Philadelphia, Atlanta and Washington.

The second conference would have a Midwest division made up of Detroit, Pittsburgh, Minnesota, Chicago and St. Louis. A Western section would have Colorado, Edmonton, Los Angeles, Vancouver and Winnipeg.

Teams would continue to play an 80-game schedule but a team in one division would play its divisional rivals eight times a season, its other conference rivals four times each and teams from the other conference twice each.

Meanwhile, on the ice, Philadelphia Flyers are back in the groove.

The Flyers went a league-record 35 games without a loss during the first half of the schedule but were slowed earlier this month by — shame, shame — two losses. But the Flyers, determined to prove the record streak was no fluke, frustrated Chicago Black Hawks 4-1 Wednesday to extend their latest undefeated mark to six games.

Frustrated indeed were the Hawks. The home club outshot the Flyers 38-27. That included a second period in which Chicago held a lopsided 18-7 edge in shots on goal but was outscored 3-1.

Elsewhere, Edmonton Oilers edged Pittsburgh Penguins 4-3, Quebec Nordiques defeated Minnesota North Stars 6-4, New York Islanders downed Detroit Red Wings 5-3 and New York Rangers defeated Vancouver Canucks 6-4.

New York, led by Ron Duguay's two goals, extended Vancouver's winless streak to nine games.

"We've made a commitment to go with the young guys and that's the way we're going to go," said Vancouver coach Harry Neale, whose Canucks make up one of the youngest rosters in the league.

Martin rink wins zone playdowns

Canada's defending champion, Flora Martin of the Victoria Curling Club, Wednesday night won the Zone Eight final in senior women's curling playdowns in Mill Bay's Kerry Park arena.

In the final, Martin and her rink of Elsie Humphrey, Verle McKeown and Edna Messum defeated clubmates in the Elin Petch rink, 11-2, to advance to the provincial finals at North Vancouver's Hollyburn Club Feb.16-22. The winner there will go on to the national finals in Fredericton, N.B., March 15-22.

Robin 'chicken' says his coach

GOTHENBURG, Sweden (Reuter) — Robin Cousins, Britain's great hope for all the mens figure skating titles this season, brought cries of "chicken" from his own coach with his short program at the European championships Wednesday.

Jan Hoffmann of East Germany won the program and Vladimir Kovalev of the Soviet Union kept the overall lead with Cousins still a very close third, but that was not good enough for Cousins' coach, Carl Fassi.

There was nothing the matter with Cousins' overall program and all the elements required to be contained were there. But instead of linking a mandatory double loop with a triple jump, as he had planned to do and as all the other leading skaters did, Cousins combined it only with another double.

Whereas that was not technically wrong, it was a serious omission in the circumstances and probably cost Cousins enough points to keep him out of the lead.

Fassi, the ebullient little Italian-born American who coached John Curry of Britain to the European, Olympic and world championships in 1976, did not hesitate to communicate his feelings to his present pupil.

"You are chicken", he shouted at Cousins. Then as reporters suddenly gathered around, Fassi told them: "Write that in your newspaper. Cousins is chicken. That is the difference between him and Curry. Curry did everything expected of him. Cousins is a great skater, but he's chicken."

"I don't think he'll win the Olympics because of it," Fassi added.

Cousins offered no explanation for the sudden change in his program. "I did a perfect program, I did everything required, but I just didn't do what I had set out to do," he said. "It shows how important the triple jumps are nowadays."

Otherwise, Cousins was flawless, but Kovalev, the world champion, and Hoffmann, the defending European titleholder, were also in excellent form.

Kovalev, who led after the compulsory figures, is still in front with a total of 83.24 points and 16 ordinals. Hoffmann also has 16 ordinals and 82.96 points while Cousins is third with 83.00 points, and 19 placements.

Despite his performance Wednesday Cousins can certainly still win the competition tonight when the five-minute free skating program count for 50 per cent of the total marks.

Meanwhile, Irina Rodnina and Alexander Zaitsev won the pairs gold during a sweep of the medals by the Soviet Union.

Marina Cherkasova and Sergei Shakrai won the silver medal and Marina Pestova and Stanslav Lzonovich took the bronze to round out an impressive Soviet performance.

In the ice dance competition, defending champions Natalia Linichuk and Gennadi Karponosov of the Soviet Union took the lead as anticipated after the first two compulsory dances.

UVic basketball squads can't afford to lay back

Complacency could be the biggest enemy facing both the University of Victoria Vikings and Vikettes in their Canada West University Athletic Union basketball games in the McKinnon Gym this Friday and Saturday nights.

Take a look at the record. Vikings are top of the league with an impressive eight wins in eight outings and their rivals this weekend, Saskatchewan Huskies, have lost all eight.

Last year, the Vikings swept the Huskies four times and this season the Saskatchewan squad is still waiting for their new coach to work wonders. Kerry Vinson, who had been coaching in Europe, joined the Huskies from Oregon at the start of this season but hasn't been able to turn enthusiasm into victory.

Only Gary Becky, who has been scoring around 20 points a game, has looked impressive and the rest of the Huskies have been mediocre.

One would think the Vikings would find it hard to get 'up' for their two-game series with the Huskies at 8 both Friday and Saturday nights in the McKinnon. But Viking coach Ken Shields says it's not so.

"At this point in the season, what we're trying to do is develop consistency," Shields says. "It's not a case of being able to get up for a game. We should be able to handle them without any great difficulty, certainly, but we've still got to go out there and perform as though this wasn't a factor."

And, there is a possibility the Vikings may have to take on the Huskies without Reni Dolcetti, their scoring leader last season.

Dolcetti was benched Tuesday night, apparently for disciplinary reasons, when the Vikings took on Athletes in Action and didn't play last weekend, either, when UVic defeated UBC Thunderbirds in two straight in Vancouver.

Shields didn't want to comment on the trouble, saying it was an internal thing. But he did say the chances of Dolcetti playing this weekend were "reasonably good."

Ken's wife Kathy Shields, who coaches the high-flying Vikettes, admits they have as big a problem as the Vikings overcoming complacency.

No.1 ranked nationally, the Vikettes have won all 10 of their Canada West league games while the Saskatchewan Huskiettes (whom they play at the McKinnon at 6:30 Friday and Saturday nights) have won three games and lost seven and are in a fourth-place tie with Lethbridge in the six-team league.

"We've played them twice this season and we've beaten them fairly comfortably both times," Kathy explains. "But they're quite a tough team.

"If we play well, we should be all right," Kathy points out. "As long as we don't take them too lightly!"

Hockey, basketball on menu

Basketball and hockey share the spotlight equally on the local sports scene tonight.

In hockey, Saanich Braves face Oak Bay Trios in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" League game at 8 in Oak Bay Recreation Centre while PPCLI Pats tackle Esquimalt Maple Leafs at 8:15 and Western Homes Buckaroos take on Victoria Athletics at 9:45 in South Island Big Six League games at Pearkes Arena.

New CFL time-out rule would enhance game

Times News Services

Each team would be permitted to call a 60-second time-out in the last three minutes of each half of a game if a recommendation by the Canadian Football League rules committee is accepted.

"It should add an entertaining dimension," commissioner Jake Gaudaur told a news conference that followed a rules committee meeting Wednesday.

The rules committee consists of six general managers, three from each of the Eastern and Western Conferences, and the CFL's two supervisers of officials. Its recommendations must be approved by the league's executive committee, which meets in Toronto next month.

The time-out proposal was the only break with CFL tradition. Other rule changes recommended by the committee expanded on existing regulations.

Elsewhere, quarterback Tom Wilkinson said he will be back with Edmonton Eskimos in 1980, his ninth season with the defending Grey Cup champions, and placekicker Cyril McFall is seeking employment in the CFL after an ill-fated one-year stay on the injury list of Denver Broncos of the National Football League . . . The rights to McFall, a 26-year-old Winnipeg native, still belong to Calgary . . . A citizens committee has been formed in Winnipeg to prevent Blue Bombers from trading Bernie Ruoff, their 28-year-old placekicker . . . Ruoff was put on the trading block after his appearance in court last month on charges of possession of marijuana . . . David Stitz, chairman of the Keep-Bernie-Ruoff-In-Winnipeg committee, said 2,000 fans have signed a petition to keep the kicker in Winnipeg . . . Veteran coach Bud Riley has been signed as an assistant coach by Saskatchewan Roughriders . . . He will handle the defensive secondary under head coach Ron Lancaster.

Changes at the top for the Shamrocks

Ralph Baker is the new general manager of the Victoria Shamrocks lacrosse club.

Baker, a former player and long-time Shamrock director and assistant general manager, was elected at the club's annual meeting Wednesday night to take over from the retiring Leon Hall.

Hall, who said he had to step down because of work commitments, told the meeting he would stay on as a director and publicity chairman.

Ted Espley was elected to replace Fred Wooster as club president and former treasurer Bruce Fennell was elected to the new post of vice-president. Cliff Newman remained as secretary, Mason Sheldrick was named treasurer and Ken Black was elected assistant director.

Wenzel wins another

MARIBOR, Yugoslavia (Reuter) — Hanni Wenzel of Liechtenstein sped to her second consecutive World Cup slalom victory Wednesday, extending her over-all lead and confirming her favorite status for next month's Olympics.

The 23-year-old skier, who seems to have timed her form to perfection, won both legs of the race in pouring rain on a hill short of snow.

She had an aggregate time of one minute 18.11 seconds, comfortably ahead of Perrine Pelen of France and Annemarie Moser of Austria.

Wenzel has a total of 282 World Cup points, ahead of Moser with 240 and Marie-Theres Nadig of Switzerland with 170.

The big surprise was the fifth place finish of 21-year-old Soviet skier Nadezhda Patrakeeva, a virtually unknown.

There was also a good American showing with Abigail Fisher in fourth place and Tamara McKinney ninth after setting the third fastest time in the second run.

Couvelier loses in land switch bid

Saanich mayor Mel Couvelier lost by a 5-to-3 vote Wednesday when a Capital Regional District committee refused to support his demand that 25 acres of B.C. Hydro land in North Quadra be taken out of the agricultural land reserve.

But the mayor served notice he will raise the issue again at the next regional board meeting.

Saanich planner Gil Laurenson told the local works and services committee that 55 housing units and an 11-acre park are included in the North Quadra proposal.

He said rural use of the land is incompatible with the surrounding urban areas. He said retention of the agricultural land would lead to higher building costs for lots around it and mean Saanich would be unable to develop the kind of quality residential area it was planning.

Couvelier said Saanich would have to pay more for the Hydro-owned park if the land is not taken out of the reserve so the houses can be built.

He said the proposed development is within Saanich's urban containment boundaries, laid down 20 years ago by council.

Regional board chairman Jim Campbell said the CRD can only recommend removal of land from the reserve when it is in the interest of the public.

He said it was bad planning to put residential development on land within the reserve, pointing out the reserve had been created especially to prevent urban encroachment.

Saanich, he said, had apparently based its plans on the assumption the land was reserved for builders when, in fact, it was reserved for agriculture.

"The decisions made by municipal councils 10 to 20 years ago were the kind of decisions that made it necessary to have an agricultural reserve," Campbell said.

"If you look at the ultimate obscenity which is Richmond and see how it was totally destroyed by municipal ambitions you will understand why we have the ALR."

Nine-hole fees at Cedar Hill

A twilight green fee has been approved for municipally-owned Cedar Hill Golf Club by Saanich parks committee.

Under the new fee schedule players will pay $4 weekdays and $5 weekends to play nine holes in the three hours before sunset.

Recreation director William Young told the committee the twilight green fee was advocated by ardent golfers.

One letter writer told the municipality many Saanich residents are irritated because the course is only available on an 18 hole basis for $7 weekdays and $8 weekends.

Credit-granting firms to aid debt counselling

Credit-granting institutions have agreed to help develop a free counselling service for British Columbians who can't handle their debts, Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen announced today.

Banks, finance companies, credit unions, trust companies and department stores will provide free debt counselling for their overcommitted customers, with the support of Nielsen's ministry.

The program is a first in Canada. It will begin as a pilot project in two B.C. communities to be selected within the next few weeks and will later be expanded to other areas of the province.

Nielsen said the debt-counselling services now provided by government are inadequate to deal with the increasing needs of British Columbians and the credit industries' volunteer program will ease the pressure.

"It won't cost the taxpayer anything but it will help reduce the social costs assosiated with credit abuse, such as personal bankruptcy and broken families," the minister said.

Representatives of the credit industry and the Consumer Association of Canada will work together with ministry staff to develop details of the counselling service.

Roadside safety checks

The highways ministry is conducting roadside inspections to reduce the number of unsafe commercial vehicles, Highways Minister Alex Fraser said Wednesday.

The inspections will be done by weigh-scale operators and motor vehicle inspectors in conjunction with local police and the RCMP, he said.

"The most frequent single safety deficiency found by ministry inspectors on these large trucks and trailers is brakes out of adjustment," Fraser said. "In many cases adjustments are not being checked frequently enough."

Before the judge

Judge Blake Allan committed a 23-year-old Malaysian student for higher-court trial Wednesday following a two-day preliminary hearing.

Kian Hock Koh is charged with the Nov. 8 attempted murder of a 19-year-old woman outside her apartment building at 1635 Cook and possession of a firearm dangerous to the public peace.

A Yukon gold-digger was given a 30-day jail term by Judge Fred Green for drug trafficking.

Ronald Charles Davis, 31, pleaded guilty to trafficking in hashish May 8 and originally elected trial by judge and jury. But he failed to show up for a Dec. 17 preliminary hearing and was arrested two weeks ago.

Crown counsel John Simpson told the court Davis sold three grams of hash to an undercover policewoman for $25 after complaints had been received by police about Davis selling drugs at the Bastion Inn beer parlor.

Defence lawyer John Hills said Davis was a gold-digger from May until November or December each year and moved south for the remaining months. He said Davis was intoxicated at the time and couldn't remember what happened.

Green remanded an 18-year-old in custody until next Thursday for sentencing after he pleaded guilty to two offences.

Colin George Caldwell, described by defence lawyer Barry Mah Ming as a borderline case of mental retardation, pleaded guilty to indecent assault and performing an indecent act.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang said the indecent assault occurred about 7 p.m. Jan. 14 on Gorge Road near Gorge Road Hospital. Lang said Caldwell approached a 20-year-old woman and asked her for a kiss. When refused, Lang said, Caldwell grabbed and hugged her before she could break away.

The indecent act happened the next night at 10:30 p.m. in the parking lot of Royal Jubilee Hospital where Caldwell exposed himself to a female.

Caldwell had previous convictions for an indecent assault on a male and unlawful confinement.

Calling the incident "gross," Green handed 20-year-old Keith Wayne John Underwood, 2527 Graham, a four-day jail sentence for impaired driving.

Withdrawing a charge of dangerous driving, Lang said Underwood was driving in the 2200-block Douglas about 12:40 a.m. Jan. 12 when he passed another vehicle going the same direction on the inside at a speed estimated by the other driver as 130 km/h. At that point, Lang said, Underwood lost control of his vehicle, which slid off the road on to the sidewalk and hit a lamp standard and tree before coming to rest against a power pole.

Lang said the Jaws of Life, a mechanical lifesaving device, was required to extricate Underwood from his demolished car.

Underwood, an unemployed fishpacker not yet in receipt of unemployment insurance benefits, denied he was going at the speed estimated by the other driver.

Green handed out a nominal jail term to one woman and a nominal fine to another drinking driver.

Lillian Ferguson, 52, of 465 Dressler, was given concurrent, one-day terms after she pleaded guilty to impaired driving and refusing a breath test demand.

Fined $50 after pleading guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 was Richard Fred McBratney, who was also given 125 hours of community service work to perform.

American given break

Judge Montague Drake said Wednesday in giving a U.S. Army private a one-year suspended sentence it was most unusual but warranted in the circumstances.

He made the comment in Victoria county court after finding Robert Walter Shire, 20, guilty of assault causing bodily harm to a 22-year-old Victoria woman early last June 2.

Drake said normally a jail sentence would be imposed but the circumstances were unusual and it was plain that Shire will not be back in Canada for a long time, if ever, so there was no question of protecting the community.

Shire, from Brownsville, Texas, and based in Fort Lewis, Wash., appeared to have a promising army career which should not be un... ...ferered with... said Drake.

Defence counsel John Hills had said Shire likely will face an army board of inquiry, that he is due for duty in Italy, and a jail term could result in expulsion from the army.

Shire spent three days in custody before his release on bail and the army reduced his seniority by five days for being absent without leave.

Shire, who denied attacking or seeing the woman who was walking home alone on Quadra Street, was arrested a short distance from where she was attacked and beaten about the face. He was wearing clothing identical to her description and the woman identified him as her assailant at the police station and twice in court.

Drake said he had no doubt Shire was the man concerned. The circumstantial facts were close to conclusive and were bolstered by what he called weak evidence of identification.

Also in county court, Judge Peter Millward sentenced Randolph Paul Olney, 20, to 14 days in jail after a guilty plea to possession of a stolen car.

Millward said it was clear Olney knew what he was doing was wrong and that he had a previous conviction for theft.

The big difference between a Mazda 626, and Volvo, BMW or Mercedes is the Mazda 626 is affordable.

The more you look at the Mazda 626, either the 2 door Sport Coupe or 4 door Sport Sedan, the more you'll like the idea of a European-style luxury car at a non-luxurious price. You get the engineering, performance and durability found in the more expensive European imports at a price you can afford. And when you compare the 626 with equally equipped North American cars, you'll find the 626 compares most favourably. The price for the 4 door Sports Sedan is $7295*. And the economy continues at the gas pumps where you'll find the 626 gets a healthy 8.4 L/100 km (54 km/gal).

The luxury is throughout and starts with orthopedically contoured front bucket seats with a lumbar support and height adjustment in the driver's seat. Versatile 60/40 split fold-down rear seat back for extra trunk space. AM/FM stereo radio. Electric clock. Electric remote trunk release. Rear window defroster. Styled steel wheels with steel belted radial tires. Tinted glass and much more.

So if you're looking for a car with luxury appointments coupled with superb performance at an affordable price, see the 626 at your Mazda dealer soon.

* Based on Manufacturers' Suggested List Price on January 14, 1980. Dealers may sell for less. Freight, pre-delivery inspection and tax extra.
 Numbers based on laboratory tests for the Mazda 626 with 5 speed manual transmission using approved Transport Canada test methods. Actual consumption will vary. Urban winter consumption will be significantly greater.

NDP gains from Tory deserters surprising pundits

By MARY JANIGAN
FP News Service

OTTAWA — Strategists from all three parties view the New Democratic Party's continued strength in this campaign as one of the most bizarre and fascinating phenomena of recent federal elections.

Despite a three-point Gallup Poll drop Tuesday based on an early January survey, these strategists concede that the NDP appears to be holding and even gaining support in crucial areas across Canada. What is more astonishing is that the NDP gain appears to be flowing largely from voters who swung to the Tories in the last federal election.

Surveys by all three parties show that Tory votes were pouring freely to the Liberals and the NDP during the first month of the campaign — producing yesterday's massive 49-point Liberal showing. Since that survey in early January, however, party polls show some minor weakening in Liberal support and this small swing is going back to the Tories or settling on the NDP.

This continued NDP strength could mean major gains for the party in the West — especially in British Columbia and Saskatchewan. It does not appear to be enough to warrant major gains in Atlantic Canada or Ontario — with the possible exception of certain key ridings in Hamilton, Metro Toronto, northern Ontario and perhaps Windsor.

Moreover, this situation is in direct contrast to the party position last April — one month before the May 22 election — when even the staunch NDP vote was flowing to opponents. The NDP generally maintains a steadfast core of 15 to 18 per cent of the electorate. Last April, even the NDP conceded that its share of the vote had eroded to as little as 12 per cent in Ontario.

This time, the core appears to be holding in all parts of the nation. In suburban Toronto centres, for example, union voters who opted for the Tories last May because of the lucrative mortgage interest tax deductibility proposal appear to be returning to the fold.

"This situation has happened in Saskatchewan for years — people go NDP provincially and then turn to the Tories federally," marvels a key Liberal strategist.

"What we're seeing now is Saskatchewan schizophrenia put on a national scale — it's an interesting phenomenon."

By traditional wisdom, the NDP should have been squashed in this election. In the wake of a minority, voters should have polarized around the Tories or the Liberals and elbowed the hapless NDP into the background. Instead, although the voters have polarized around the Liberal camp, all three parties reckon that the NDP has remained strong — especially in the West.

NDP campaign director Robin Sears says that his party has not been badly hurt by the swing in most areas because both Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau and Prime Minister Joe Clark are unpopular contenders in the leadership sweepstakes. NDP Leader Ed Broadbent has, in contrast, managed to maintain a relatively popular public profile.

Sears theorizes that as Tory ads turn public attention on Trudeau, some voters will slip away from the Liberals, reject the Tories and than turn to the NDP. He says an NDP poll of 1,200 voters across the nation last weekend showed that 39 per cent of the Liberal voters distrusted that party's credibility.

He also says that this same poll uncovered some fascinating data when it queried voters about their May choices: 80 to 85 per cent of the NDP voters are staying with the NDP; 65 to 70 per cent of the Liberals are staying Liberal; and only 45 to 55 per cent of the Tories are staying with the Tories.

If Sears statistics are right, — and an FP News Service poll recently also indicated massive slippage in Conservative votes — almost 50 per cent of the Tory voters last May are defecting. He says this run-off is favoring the NDP over the Liberals in the West and Atlantic Canada and benefiting the Liberals more than the NDP in Ontario. A full 50 per cent of the defecting Tory voters are, however, still torn between the Liberals and the NDP.

Sears also says that an NDP poll of 1200 voters in early January pegged his party at 24 per cent, the Tories at 31 to 32 per cent and the Liberals in the mid-forties.

Money Talk
A series in which Montreal Trust answers your questions.

"Free chequing- is it really free?"

"You advertise a chequing account that offers free cheques and no service charges. Is this true, or are there any hidden costs?"

There are no hidden costs. A Montreal Trust Personal Chequing Account really does offer you free unlimited chequing and no service charges whatsoever.

This, of course, includes all the other benefits. For example, your cheques are personalized with your name and there's a wallet for your chequebook.

Each month, a statement is mailed to you outlining what you've spent, and to help you keep track, your used cheques are returned, too.

Overdraft protection avoids embarrassment.

"I was recently embarrassed when a cheque I wrote was returned because of a lack of funds in the chequing account at my bank. The annoying thing is that I had enough in my savings account at the same branch to cover the amount. Wouldn't you think they'd have had the courtesy to check?"

That kind of situation can be irritating, but it's one we at Montreal Trust help our clients avoid by offering an overdraft protection service.

If you open a Montreal Trust Personal Chequing Account together with one of our savings accounts (either our Plus Savings or 60-Plus), we will, if you ask us, automatically cover any overdraft with funds from your savings account.

Many of our clients find this a useful service, and it has saved many an awkward situation.

Broadbent woos elderly, Trudeau sneers at Tories

ELECTION 80

REGINA (CP) — Both NDP Leader Ed Broadbent and Liberal chief Pierre Trudeau were campaigning in Prairie provinces Wednesday.

Broadbent told a Regina audience old-age pensions would increase by $40 a month and about half of Canada's pensioners would also get shelter grants if the New Democratic Party wins the Feb. 18 election.

The companion programs would cost an estimated $752 million in the first year but would be paid for almost entirely by eliminating $740 million in tax breaks for multinational oil companies, he said Wednesday.

Broadbent made the promises to a crowd of 450 persons at a luncheon hosted by Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney.

The federal NDP leader said the additional $40 would raise the universal old-age pension to about $225 a month or $2,700 a year. Broadbent said that represents about 17 per cent of the average Canadian's income, the level at which pensions were first introduced.

And he said they would be kept in line through continued quarterly indexing and annual reviews.

Under his shelter grant program, poorer pensioners who qualify for federal guaranteed income supplements would also receive one-third of their rent to a maximum of $50 a month or 20 per cent of their property taxes to a maximum of $10 a month.

The NDP's promises to pensioners Wednesday would give a single pensioner who rents and has no other income a total of $2,700 a year in old-age security pension payments, $1,800 in guaranteed income supplements and a maximum shelter grant of $600 for a total income of $5,100.

Meanwhile, in Winnipeg, Pierre Trudeau tackled the Tories, labelling Prime Minister Clark's pledge of energy self-sufficiency by 1990 "a sham" and suggesting it is little more than an excuse for proposed record increases in energy prices and taxes.

The Liberal leader claimed before about 2,000 students squeezed into an assembly hall at the University of Manitoba that even Progressive Conservative Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn has admitted the goal will not be reached by the end of the decade.

Trudeau quoted Hnatyshyn as telling a Commons committee Dec. 6 the country will still be importing 250,000 barrels of oil a day in 1990, about the same level as today.

However, a transcript of the committee hearing reveals Hnatyshyn said Canada would be able to reduce imports to 250,000 barrels from a projected 500,000 barrels a day by 1990 by adopting part of the Conservative energy package — high prices and conservation measures.

Hnatyshyn did not tell the committee the package, released last month, also contains suggestions for reducing further, and perhaps eliminating, imports.

The ommission did not stop Trudeau from criticizing the Conservatives' approach to energy.

"Double the taxes. Keep the imports. That's the Tory policy," he said.

"Mr. Clark's pledge, his policy of oil self-sufficiency in 10 years is just a sham."

Mackasey free with airline passes?

MONTREAL (CP) — Liberal candidate Bryce Mackasey issued free airline passes, including one to the maitre d'hotel of an exclusive Montreal restaurant, while he was chairman of Air Canada last year, according to the Montreal Gazette.

The newspaper quotes Mackasey as saying he thinks confidential information about the passes was leaked by unnamed Air Canada officials to embarrass and harass him in his attempted political comeback as a federal candidate in Ontario.

Mackasey became embroiled in a public dispute with Air Canada and the federal government when he was fired last summer, shortly after the Progressive Conservatives took power. He is running for Parliament in the Hamilton-area riding of Lincoln.

The Gazette says the information was contained in documents that apparently originated in the Crown corporation's Montreal head office. They were delivered anonymously to Southam offices in Ottawa.

Free passes were issued to members of Mackasey's family, government staff members and journalists, Southam says. But The Gazette says Mackasey as chairman issued only 15 passes.

Mackasey is quoted as saying the passes he issued were covered by Air Canada rules for top executives. The chairman is allowed to issue an unlimited number of passes to his immediate family, 70 "promotional" passes a year, and passes to "others" worth $1,500 or less, he said.

The president of the airline, Claude Taylor, has the same privileges, Mackasey said.

The Gazette says Brock Stewart, an Air Canada spokesman, declined to discuss any details of pass provisions for senior executives — or the names of persons receiving passes — because the airline considers this information to be confide[illegible]

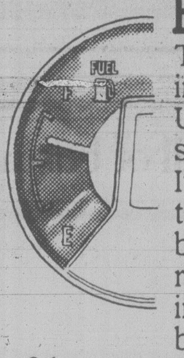
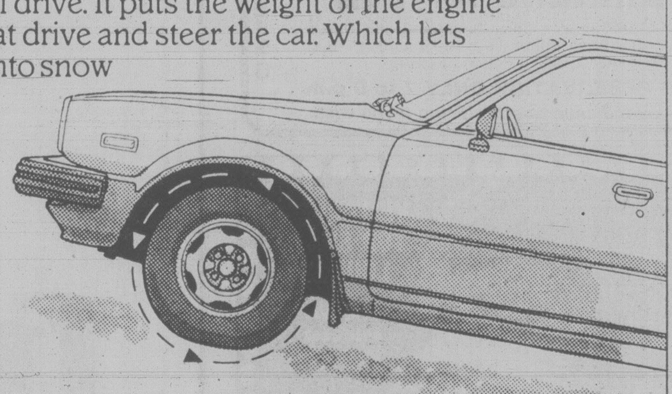
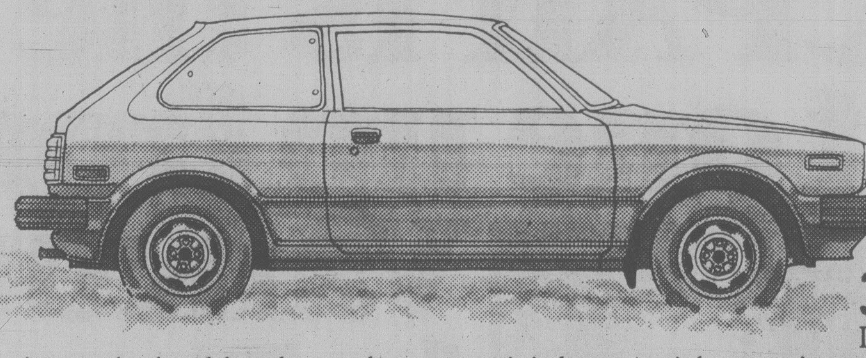
THE NEW HONDA CIVIC. WHEN IT BLOWS THE LEGEND GOES AND GOES.



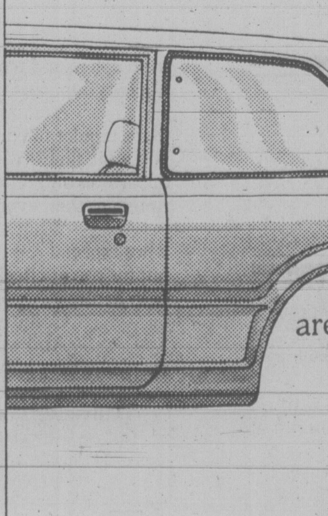
BETTER GAS MILEAGE.
The new Honda Civic is 13% bigger inside and has a bigger engine. Usually that means the mileage gets smaller. Not so with the new Civic. It's true that it got bigger, but it's also true that the mileage got bigger. And better. It gets a transport Canada rating of 6.7 litres per 100 kms.* A rating that is good enough to be beaten by only 4 other cars in Canada. Two of them are Hondas, and one of them gets the best gasoline mileage of all... the Honda GL 1500.

FRONT WHEEL DRIVE.
One of the reasons that the original Honda Civic became Canada's best selling small car is one of the reasons why the new Civic will continue to be a success. It's Honda's famous front wheel drive. It puts the weight of the engine over the wheels that drive and steer the car. Which lets those wheels bite into snow and mud and help pull you through.





3-YEAR ANTI-CORROSION WARRANTY.
If a car is to survive Canadian driving conditions it must be made durable. That's why every Civic has special corrosion resistant lower body panels, plastic front inner fender liners and uses overlapping, sealed body seams to help resist the effects of salt and slush. Every Honda is guaranteed to remain free from surface corrosion for 12 months and free from perforation due to corrosion for 36 months. Your Honda dealer will gladly explain all the details.



EVERYTHING FITS.
Open the door of a new Civic. Then close it. And notice how snugly it fits and how well everything lines up. Then look at the other body panels to see how impeccably they're fitted. And how the paint is finished. Inside the fit, finish and detailing says the same thing; Honda's quality control standards are second to none.

LOWER PRICE.
Don't ask us how we did it, but we made the car bigger and better and the price smaller and better. This year's Honda Civic Hatchback actually costs less than the Civic Hatchback did a year ago. Priced from $4695.

THE LEGEND GETS BIGGER.

*These figures are estimates based on Transport Canada approved laboratory test methods. The actual mileage you get will vary according to your driving habits, your car's condition, optional equipment and driving conditions. These estimates do, however, provide a useful comparison guide for new car models.
Manufacturer's suggested list price for the 1980 Honda Civic Hatchback. Price does not include freight, provincial taxes, licence or dealer preparation charges. Dealer may sell for less. Model illustrated is the Civic Hatchback Deluxe.

Davis supports Clark

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Joe Clark and Ontario Premier William Davis put aside their differences over domestic oil pricing and revenue-sharing arrangements Wednesday for some partisan politicking.

But Davis stressed in a brief news conference with Clark after the meeting that the battle is not over.

"There are some areas of difference, as one might expect," Davis told Clark. "But that doesn't take away from my commitment, my enthusiasm and my support for you and your federal colleagues."

This was Davis's first foray into the Feb. 18 federal election campaign.

Davis was on holiday in Florida during the early part of the campaign. Because of his absence, there was talk that the strong Ontario Tory machine controlled by Davis would not be as prominent in support of Clark as it had been before last May's election.

"We came expecting to be impressed and we were," Environment Minister Harry Parrott said.

Even distressing polls didn't dampen the enthusiasm of the 51 Ontario Tory legislature members who joined Clark for a private lunch and heard his assessment of his campaign.

Later, Davis's staff released a tentative schedule which shows the premier will appear five times with Clark before Feb 18. This includes rallies in Toronto, Ottawa and Barrie.

The early list of commitments indicates that Davis will spend eight days helping federal Tory candidates in Ontario. Most observers say Clark will have to retain most of the 57 seats he won in Ontario last May if he hopes to remain prime minister.

No apathy in latest voter crop

FP News Service

OTTAWA — Judging by the number of calls flooding into the federal electoral officers across Canada from would-be voters wanting to ensure that they are on the voters' list, there is no apathy in this campaign, Chief Electoral Officer Jean Marc Hamel said Wednesday.

Persons anxious to be eligible to vote and worried that their names are not on the voters' list are flooding telephone lines at election offices across the country, he told a press conference.

Cards have been sent out to all those on the voters' list. If a person age 18 or over, eligible to vote has not received a card he or she should get in touch with their local electoral officers.

About 25 per cent of the people on the voters' list move each year. If a voter has received a card at his new residence which was forwarded by the post office from his old address the voter must ensure that he is down on the voters' list with his new address.

'Love of Life' killed by ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — Love of Life is dead at the age of 29, victim of television's most common disease — low ratings.

"It really hasn't died a natural death," said Larry Auerbach, the first and only director of one of TV's longest-running daytime serials. "It was murdered."

Love of Life was stricken last April 23, said Auerbach, when CBS shifted the program to 4 p.m. from its 11:30 a.m. time slot.

It was business as usual Wednesday in Studio 41 at CBS's Broadcast Centre, as the cast and technicians gathered to tape episode No. 7315, the next-to-last in a series that began midmorning Sept. 24, 1951. But the mood was somber.

"That was my last scene," said one actor, passing through the control room. "I'm kind of down."

"It's a wrench," agreed Kenneth Roberts, the announcer for Love of Life from the first episode.

The last instalment will be broadcast the afternoon of Feb. 1, and most of the story's loose ends will be left hanging.

Equal pensions for women demanded in rights act

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has authorized new Human Rights Act regulations aimed at removing discrimination against women from some pension plans provided by employers under federal jurisdiction.

The new regulations, adopted by the federal cabinet Jan. 11 and released by the Human Rights Commission Wednesday, are to come into effect March 1, 1980.

They require the employers to provide equal pension benefits to women and men, even if this means the employers will have to shell out more money for female employees.

Many employers now pay smaller monthly benefits to women on grounds females live longer than men and thus will end up getting about the same amount as men receiving more benefits for a shorter period.

The regulations apply to 164 money-purchase pension plans covering about 12,500 employees. They are contained in a new package of regulations that will govern 665 pension plans covering about 580,000 employees.

The employees are those in Crown corporations and federally-regulated private industry, such as chartered banks and inter-provincial trucking companies. Civil servants are not affected by the changes. Only Parliament can change pension legislation that governs them.

The regulations basically tell employers what kind of distinctions they can make on the basis of sex, age, marital status or physical handicap without violating the Human Rights Act. Pensions have been totally exempt from the 1977 act while officials decided how the law should be applied.

The act generally prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex, age, marital status or handicap. So these regulations provide exceptions to the rule.

Three other regulations in the new package singled out as important by the human rights commission establish these rules:

— It is not discriminatory to exclude employees from joining a pension plan until they reach age 25. Some plans exclude employees up to age 30.

— It is not discriminatory to pay higher contributions to a pension plan for survivors benefits to a married person than to a single person. This virtually validates common practice.

— It is not discriminatory to require employees to meet certain health standards for disability income or health insurance plans in organizations with less than 25 employees.

Armed forces families have problems, too

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — People who live and work on military bases suffer from the same social problems as civilians, but they often have fewer places to turn for help, a Canadian Forces social worker said Wednesday.

Captain Jacques Godreau, a social worker at CFB Borden, told a group of base services personnel and representatives from several social-service agencies in Simcoe County that soldiers often need help from agencies in nearby communities.

He said he wanted to establish contact with the professional agencies in the area and make it easier for base personnel to obtain the right referrals when problems arise.

There are already a number of social development programs at CFB Borden designed to prevent or resolve adjustment problems among military personnel and their dependants. These include financial counselling and drug and alcohol education.

In answering his own question as to why the Canadian Forces bothers with people who have personal adjustment problems instead of asking them to leave, Godreau said training replacements would be costly. He also said there is no guarantee they would fare better.

"We cannot effectively predict what a recruit's social life will be in many facets of service life and we cannot forecast exactly what socially-stressful situations he will encounter throughout his service career."

While a recruit must be single when he enlists, he may later marry and have children. And the Canadian Forces has no control over his selection of a wife or what his children will be like, he said.

Godreau added that military personnel are often separated from the support of their families when problems arise. And when relocated, they usually have no choice about when or where they are to be moved.

"Certainly the families of serving members are subject to unusual stresses and strains.

"So social adjustment problems are bound to occur and we just have to accept this fact."

Taxmen dig for gold

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal revenue department may have trouble finding the profits taxpayers have made on gold and silver, but officials will be looking.

James Gourlay, director-general of the department's compliance directorate, said Tuesday it may be next to impossible to keep tabs on how much customers have made on gold and silver since prices began their sharp climb last fall.

Gourlay said banks are keeping records, but "if a guy's been given a false name, then it becomes diffi[illegible]"

And false names are probably not uncommon, he added, because banks and sellers are not particularly interested in the identity of such customers.

One bank manager here said his bank hasn't been asked by the revenue department to provide names of buyers and sellers, but that the bank does keep records of such transactions.

Bawlf's tunnel vision alternative to ferry expansion

By AL FORREST

Former provincial cabinet minister Sam Bawlf Wednesday urged the provincial government to study the feasibility of constructing a tunnel to connect Vancouver Island to the Lower Mainland.

He said the tunnel, regardless of what it might cost, would be a reasonable alternative to the $1 billion expansion that would otherwise be required by B.C. Ferries over the next decade.

Bawlf told a Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce meeting at The Empress that he researched the tunnel idea two years ago, when he was in the cabinet and in charge of the B.C. Ferries fleet.

In Bawlf's vision, the tunnel would not allow cars. Instead it would have a rail line carrying both passengers and freight. On the Vancouver side, the passenger service would start in downtown Vancouver on a proposed new rapid transit line running out to Richmond and the airport.

A spur line could run from Richmond to Vancouver Island through a tunnel, where it would connect with existing E&N rail lines to come into Victoria.

The tunnel would be no more than 30 kilometres long and the subway train could cover the distance in 20 minutes travelling at 90 kph.

As an important additional consideration, he said, the tunnel could be used for new power lines from the mainland and for a natural gas pipeline route.

Movement of freight through the tunnel would restore Vancouver Island to the status of a major seaport because ships could unload here and avoid the congestion in Burrard Inlet.

The Canadian government should assist with the financing as sort of a miniature St. Lawrence Seaway project.

"After all, Canada still owes B.C. a rail link to Vancouver Island under the terms by which B.C. joined Confederation," he said to loud applause.

Bawlf said that, with or without the tunnel, the provincial government should take over the E & N railway "from an uncaring CPR" and develop it as a rapid transit system for the Island.

The alternative, he said, is for a highway bypass for the Malahat, which is being studied by the provincial department of highways but would be extremely costly.

Bawlf said all transit authorities should be thinking of a reduced role for the private car in all their planning.

No cars could use the tunnel, for example, because of the driving hazard in the relatively-confined space. Those wanting to take their cars would continue to use the B.C. Ferries system.

Bawlf introduced Sir Ralph Freeman from London, recently-retired senior partner of Freeman Fox & Partners, who assisted Bawlf with the Georgia Strait tunnel study two years ago.

Sir Ralph was in Victoria for a short visit before flying to Hong King to view that city's new 15-kilometre $1 billion subway system designed by his firm.

Bawlf said Japan already has a 45-kilometre rail tunnel connecting the islands of Hokkaido and Honshu, so it should be possible in British Columbia.

Bawlf also called for private enterprise to operate a jetfoil service connecting Victoria and Nanaimo to Vancouver.

A jetfoil could carry passengers from downtown Vancouver to Swartz Bay in 80 minutes, compared with nearly three hours by bus or car via Tsawwassen and compared with one hour by bus and plane from downtown Vancouver to Pat Bay airport.

With jetfoils, connecting buses would carry passengers from Swartz Bay to downtown Victoria.

The break-even rate for jetfoils from downtown Vancouver to Swartz Bay would be $9, significantly lower than the bus-air fare but higher than the $5.75 cost for bus service from the downtown Vancouver terminal to Swartz Bay.

Bawlf said the real cost of that bus-ferry ride is about $10, with the balance of the fare covered by provincial government subsidies.

Mary Ellen Wolfe, a 62-year-old resident of Lakeside, Ohio, who suffers from rheumatoid arthritis, decided to donate her body upon her death to the Medical College of Ohio in Toledo. Earlier she received an authorization form from the chairman of the college's anatomy department, Liberato DiDio, with a letter informing her, however, that "budgetary stringencies oblige the college to request a modest $60 fee of each donor" and that she should also "make provision for transportation" to the school. Wolfe said she was "furious," and added that the medical college's letter had enclosed a self-addressed envelope with no stamp. "When I go," she declared, "I'm going six feet under."

abby

Dear Abby:

Every year my husband and I send over 200 Christmas cards. They cost 40 cents each, plus 15 cents postage, and I personally address each envelope by hand.

Yesterday I received the following note from a couple who live out of town and send us one of those boring, bragging, four-page mimeographed newsletters every Christmas:

"Dear Eunice and Norbert:

We appreciate being remembered at Christmas. Your card was decorative, but very cold and impersonal. If you can't take a minute to add a personal word or two, or sign it yourselves, please take our names off your list. Emily and Harold."

Shocked

Dear Shocked:

Congratulations, you have just saved 55 cents.

Dear Abby:

I am extremely fond of a young woman and am considering marriage, but something bothers me. Having a meal — just the two of us — in the privacy of her apartment is something of an ordeal because she is terribly strict about table manners. Elbows off the table, knife and fork properly placed on the plate when not in use. Chew food well, and absolutely no talking with food in mouth. No resting the arms or hands on the table while eating, etc., etc.

I would like to dine in a relaxed, comfortable manner without worrying about the rules of etiquette constantly. Be assured, I do not eat like a hog, and my manners wouldn't offend even the fussiest lady. But what would marriage with such a woman be like?

Wondering

Dear Wondering:

Like being 9 years old again, and being married to your mother.

Dear Abby:

Two years ago my parents were divorced. Dad promptly married the woman he had been seeing for three years before that. This is a small town, so everybody knew about it. My brother and I (then in high school), my mother, and even my father and the other woman suffered from the talk.

Now that I am older and (I hope) wiser, I look back on the ordeal as a valuable, if painful, learning experience. My brother and I have spent a lot of time with my father and his new wife, and although we were prepared to hate her, we cannot hate a woman who has made our father so happy. I can't recall that Mom ever made Dad smile or laugh. She picked at him, criticized, and put him down constantly. He could never do anything to please her.

Still Learning

Dear Still:

I hope you remember that valuable "learning experience" in the event that you choose marriage — or marriage chooses you.

Anti-abortion demonstrators gathered in Washington Tuesday to urge U.S.Congress to adopt a constitutional amendment that would outlaw abortions

No solution in abortion split

By NORMAN GIDNEY

The continuation of the pregnancy of such female person would or would be likely to endanger her life or health . . .

From this section of the Criminal Code of Canada enacted in 1969 has flowed the never-ending controversy over the moral dilemma of abortion.

B.C.'s new health minister, Rafe Mair, says he is alarmed and shocked at the province's high abortion rate — 33.6 abortions for every 100 babies delivered alive.

Personally opposed to abortion, he has said he is going to tighten up and try to reduce the province's abortion rate.

Though it is the highest in Canada — more than double the national average — and preliminary statistics suggest it will be even higher this year, it is lower than in the U.S. and almost the same as Sweden's and Great Britain's.

Various anti-abortion groups which gather under the Pro-Life banner think even one abortion is too many. In 1978 there were 62,290 abortions in Canada, versus more than 300,000 live births.

Victoria psychiatrist Dr. Philip Ney links the increased abortion rate with a rise in child abuse, discrediting somewhat the belief that freely available abortion means only wanted children are being born.

Women's groups maintain that abortion should be strictly a matter between a woman and her physician, that she should have the freedom to choose.

But all agree on one thing. Abortion is a difficult moral issue with many shadings of opinion and no easy solution.

It comes down to the meaning of a single word — health — in the criminal code section governing abortion.

Most B.C. hospitals have used the World Health Organization definition. It says health is not merely the absence of physical or mental illness, but a state of general physical, mental and social well-being.

When a doctor tells a hospital therapeutic abortion committee that his patient's health would be endangered if she had to continue her pregnancy to term, in most cases it's the WHO definition the physician is using

And it's rare for the committee to turn someone down. One doctor on staff at Royal Jubilee says it's a rubber stamp, automatically approving every application that comes before it. The doctors have no choice but to believe the woman's own physician when he says her health is in danger, he says.

Procedures have been tightened up in recent years to provide the committee with more information on each applicant, but the statistics show anyone who wants an abortion can get one — although lately there are reports of a shift in opinion on some hospital abortion committees, especially in smaller communities outside Vancouver.

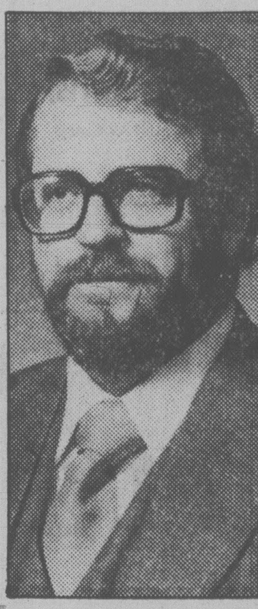
Royal Jubilee in 1978 performed 383 abortions versus 1,391 live births, and rejected only two applications. That works out to an abortion rate of 27.5 per cent.

In 1977, there were 338 abortions at RJH (1,461 live births, or 23.1 per cent) and five rejections. In the first six months this year, the hospital issued 314 certificates for abortions (some certificates are not used) and again rejected only two, while there were 707 live births.

The VGH performed 734 abortions in 1977, compared with 1,168 live births — for a rate of 62.8 per cent. In 1978 the VGH did 797 abortions, versus 1,234 live births — 64.6 per cent, nearly double the provincial figure.

But these figures are somewhat misleading. The Victoria General's rate is high because it has an abortion outpatient clinic. Women do not take up a hospital bed overnight and stay only a few hours.

It is performing abortions for women from all over the capital regional district and beyond.



MAIR

Why is the B.C. rate so high compared with the rest of Canada? Nobody seems to know. Dr. John Dickinson of Courtenay, a physician who is president of the Family Planning Association of Canada, suggests "we're a growing and more transient population, with a somewhat free lifestyle."

Dr. J.A. Hutchinson, registrar of the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons, says he can accept the law but "what I find difficult to live with is the segment of society that seeks to use abortions in lieu of proper family planning."

As a doctor on staff, "periodically it would be my turn to do the abortion slate on a Saturday and maybe we would do as many as 13 or 15, and it was a mill.

"None of us liked it. It was a distasteful thing. Now I can't give you what percentage was justifiable but I can distinctly remember one of the orderlies saying to me 'This girl, this is her third'.

"When he asked her why, she said it was cheaper than the pill."

A committee was established several years ago at the Jubilee to review abortion procedures, and reccommended tightening up the guidelines.

The doctors on the committee faced serious problems. They were split between those who accepted abortion, although reluctantly, and those who were opposed to it.

"Secondly, the Criminal Code relating to abortion was ambiguous in that people tended to interpret it as they felt it should be interpreted," their report said.

"This virtually made it impossible to use the law as a firm guide. Thirdly, it appeared that a majority of the general public has accepted the principle of abortion, more or less on demand, and would not likely accept any return to the previous restrictive legislation.

"One area that seemed to disturb most members of the committee was the apparent rubberstamping of abortion requests, i.e. only occasional applications are rejected.

"This is no reflection on the abortion committees, since within our present guidelines it is difficult to reject an application if the attending doctor categorically states that the continuation of the pregnancy will be or will be likely be a threat to the life or health of the mother."

The committee's recommendation that the patient herself become more involved in the procedure was followed up. Now she or her doctor must complete an application form with much more information, including past history of any physical or mental disease, present mental condition, and a reply from the father whether he wishes the woman to have an abortion.

Ultrasound studied for psoriasis use

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

It is well known that people with psoriasis fare better in the summertime, when their skin lesions are exposed to sunlight and to warmth.

Dr. Eugene Farber, Professor of Dermatology at Stanford University, has been using ultrasound techniques for the treatment of psoriasis. The heat generated by the ultrasound instrument seems to have beneficial effects on certain cases of psoriasis.

Working with Dr. E. K. Orenberg, they treated a series of cases with ultrasound and found that some of the skin lesions cleared up and remained free from psoriasis for two or three months. This hyperthermia, or heat, treatment seems to deserve further study in the hope that it can eventually be used for treating a condition that heretofore stubbornly resisted most attempts at help.

The mistletoe has, for years, had a delightful romantic connotation.

Dr. T. A. Khwaja, of the University of Southern California in Los Angeles, has now found that alkaloids extracted from mistletoe can stop the growth of cancer cells in some experimental animals.

At the present time, only a relatively small amount of the alkaloid has been available from the mistletoe plant. With better methods of production, there will be a greater yield of these alkaloids.

Dr. Khwaja notes that a protein extract of mistletoe is already being used in Europe to treat post-operative cancer of the breast, the large intestine, the stomach, rectum and cervix.

It is always intriguiging to follow the progressive inroads made by dedicated scientists as they seek the final answer to cancer.

For years, folk medicine has made the claim that there might be a relationship between onion juice and high blood pressure.

Drs. Moses and Katherine Attrep were intrigued with this idea and began to investigate it from the scientific point of view. They were able to prepare an extract from the common onion and found that it did, indeed, contain prostaglandin A1. (In these columns we have referred to the upsurgence of interest in prostaglandin A1 for varied conditions.)

There may be a relationship between onion juice and high blood pressure, but since the average onion contains only a small amount of prostaglandin A1, a person with high blood pressure would have to devour large amounts of the onion to have any anti-high blood pressure effect. Then, of course, there is the social aspect of the problem ... the effect on the breath. This would make persons with high blood pressure extremely unpopular!

Record labels are his goal

SEATTLE (AP) — Jake O'Shaugnessy is after an Irishman's record, so it was only natural he should have everyman's Irishman to help him authenticate it. O'Shaugnessy is a Seattle pub keeper whose liquor stock totals 774 labels — ranging from rare scotch to corn whiskey, "guaranteed not to be over 30 days old." That, he says, qualifies him for the Guinness Book of World Records.

UP IN ARMS of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rinus Van de Ven, quadruplets born Dec. 14 are shown ready to leave hospital in Halifax while the folks talk to reporters. The quads, Kelly, Bradley, Renus and Shannon were christened in the family's home town of Judique on Cape Breton Island.

Victoria family studied

A lot is being said these days about the demise of the nuclear family — how it has failed to adapt to the space-age world in which we live.

But at the same time statistics show us that people still marry, they still have children and they continue to put a lot of expectations on living together as a family.

What is a family today? How do husbands differ from wives in the ways they describe their family life? Is there such a thing as a normal family? If so, who are they? How are they coping with life's everyday problems? What makes a normal family tick?

Psychologists like to study abnormal family situations; sociologists like to present facts, figures and percentages when talking about families, says Dr. Francie Ricks, an associate professor in the Child Care department at the University of Victoria.

"Not long ago I realized how little literature was available on 'normal' families and decided to do something about it," she said Monday.

Many doorbells later Ricks came up with 250 families in the Victoria area who participated in a lengthy questionnaire which set out to "unmask" the modern family.

"Husbands and wives filled out the survey separately answering such questions as 'How would you describe your family? What kinds of things do you find stressful in family life? How do you deal with stress?' as well as giving a full background on their present family and the family they were raised in," she said.

Results of the research is an emerging pattern of family life in Victoria and presumably family life in general; to what extent it has changed in the last few decades and some insight into the directions in which it may be headed, she said.

Ricks will present some of her research results for the first time in a lecture sponsored by the Citizens' Counselling Centre this coming Monday, January 28, at 8 p.m. in the Metropolitan United Church Annex, 907 Pandora. Tickets are $1.50 at the door.

The lecture is entitled Families of Victoria: Changing Family Life.

"It will allow for discussion on where family life is going as we move into the '80s," said Ricks.

She said the research turned up some "amazing" results which she preferred not to disclose until the lecture.

Marriage is no mirage

TORONTO (CP) — Call it a miracle or call it a mirage, marriage is here to stay for better or for worse.

Social workers and psychologists agree on one secret of marital harmony — you have to know yourself.

"You must think well enough of yourself to know you can function independently," a Toronto psychiatrist said in an interview.

"A sense of self-esteem is very important in relating to someone else. If you think you're a terrible person, it's very hard to express your own needs."

Psychologist Keith Travis recommended that before anyone gets married they should move away from home and look after their own finances without depending on their parents.

"You have to be competent in dealing with the world before dealing with marriage," Travis said.

Sociology professor Norman Bell called a happy marriage one in which two individuals are not so dependent on each other "they look, act and feel as one."

He added that a marriage has a better chance if a couple has similar education, economic background and intellectual ability.

Ontario Lt.-Gov. Pauline McGibbon and her husband, Donald, who have been married 45 years this week, are an interesting example.

They have a happy marriage based on what they call common interests — reading, theatre, music — and a sense of humor.

However, the union hasn't "been all sweetness and light," Mrs. McGibbon said in an interview.

"One of the difficulties was that I was an only child. My friends say Don continued to spoil me . . . but there's no getting away from it. If you let little things upset you, you'll have a very difficult time.

"You've got to learn to live with one another. That takes patience, understanding and it's quite difficult when you're both sharing a bed and a home."

For the McGibbons, their busy, independent lives have contributed to their happiness.

"When people say to me that I've done so much, I say I'm lucky I married a very mature man," she said.

"Don never felt threatened by me. He always said I was more interesting to live with because of what I did."

A retired vice-president and treasurer of Imperial Oil Ltd., McGibbon is his wife's escort at most public functions.

He dispels her jitters before speech-making, and for their anniversary this Saturday, he will be by her side at a monument dedication and an official dinner with the Daughters of Scotland.

Cold cure stinks

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — Fried onions and turpentine rubbed on the chest, orange peels in the nostrils and mouse stew were some of the homespun British cold remedies displayed at a Glasgow hotel.

Dr. Nick Varey, adviser to the pharmaceutical company that put on the display to show how far medicine has advanced, said few of the old cures have any value, except.

"I think the onions and turpentine might have some effect because it is such a pungent smell," he said. "That could clear the nose.

"But I can't see the value of kissing a mule on the nose," another old remedy.

Reminders make eating plan work

By DR. JEAN MAYER
DR. JOHANNA DWYER

With this column, we'd like to give you some helpful, practical information on how to establish a sound eating plan that is good for a lifetime. You might tape this to the refrigerator door as a reminder.

1. Count every calorie in foods (including snacks) and in beverages, as well as calories that may be added by the way your food is prepared. Cook lean.

2. make every calorie count nutritionally. Have at least one serving every day from each of these seven groupings of foods to be sure you're well nourished:

—Leafy, green and yellow vegetables, especially for vitamin A as well as for iron, calcium, thiamine, riboflavin, niacin, folic acid and vitamin C — and for roughage or fibre.

—Citrus fruits, tomatoes and salad greens are good sources of vitamin C. They also provide vitamin A, iron and calcium.

—Potatoes and other vegetables and fruits. Potatoes are a souce of vitamin C, and the skins provide iron. This group supplies some of the carbohydrates the body needs for energy as well as many vitamins and minerals.

—Milk and milk products. Milk and cheese are our best source of calcium. They also contribute vitamin A, riboflavin, vitamin B12 and high-quality proteins. Skim milk is as good a source of nutrients as whole milk, except for vitamin A (unless it is fortified).

—Meat, poultry, fish, eggs, dried beans and peas and nuts are our chief sources of protein, and some provide energy from fat as well. These foods are also rich in iron, phosphorus, thiamine, and niacin. The animal protein foods provide sources of vitamin B12.

—Bread, flour and cereals, preferably, these foods should be whole-grain since the outer coat is rich in minerals and vitamins (mostly B vitamins and vitamin E), and provides valuable roughage. (If not whole-grain, make sure they're enriched.) This group also is a source of energy and protein.

—Butter, margarine and polyunsaturated oils. These foods are chiefly energy producers. Butter and vitamin A-enriched margarines are excellent sources of vitamin A. Vegetable oils also are excellent sources of [illegible] E. Polyunsaturated margarine and oils also give us the essential fatty acids.

3. Watch portion sizes. Remember that a diet, unlike a menu, must specify how much to eat as well as what.

4. Cook lean, eat lean. Avoid fatty foods and fat in cooking. Substitute herbs, lemon juice, vinegar and spices for cream, sour cream, butter or margarine. Cut down sugar and avoid sweetened foods.

5. Exercise your calories off. Remember that the more you take in the more active you must be. It takes about an hour and 15 minutes to walk off a piece of apple pie or strawberry shortcake.

Next Week: A special diet featuring menus and recipes for healthy, low-calorie eating.

Don't be pound foolish

dr. elizabeth bright-see and jane hope

Have you been saying all year that you're going to take off those unhealthy pounds? Or your doctor has told you to cut down on saturated fats, and you just haven't had time to start with all the fussing over post-Christmas bills; days too short and dark to exercise in.

Then, how about now — making some habits that will pay dividends to your personal health in the coming year. We've listed a few suggestions. But, promise yourself one thing. Once you've made a resolution, don't break it!

I will eat more fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereals.

I will eat less fatty meats like beef and pork, and more lean meats like veal, poultry and fish.

I will cut down on sugar and foods high in sugar.

I will substitute non-fat, skim and low-fat milk products for whole milk.

I will cut down on foods high in fat and substitute poly-unsaturated fats for saturated wherever possible.

I will cut down on eggs, butterfat and other high cholesterol foods.

I will cut down on salt and foods high in salt.

I will broil foods rather than fry wherever possible and will trim off all visible fat.

I'll try recipes using legumes, nuts and seeds for protein rather than meats for a change.

I will eat some high fibre grains, cereals and fruit.

I will take off those pounds by following a sensible diet based on Canada's Food Guide.

I will not go on any wild and wonderful fad diets.

I will get up a few minutes earlier each morning and start doing some basic exercise.

I will walk rather than drive — as often as possible.

I will cut down o[illegible] drinks.

I will stop smoking.

I will read a reliable book on nutrition, recommended by my local public health nutritionist.

I will keep a pin-up of Canada's Food Guide on the door of the refrigerator.

I will serve a variety of foods each day to my family so that they can get all their vitamins and minerals this way — rather than through pills.

I'll serve fresh fruit and cheese for dessert at my next dinner party, and raw vegetables for nibbles (and start a new, healthy trend).

I won't nibble on leftovers.

I will encourage the kids to help with the preparation of their school lunches and snacks — and will make sure the food is tasty and nutritious.

I won't eat when watching television.

I will keep a supply of raw vegetables, cheese, crackers, nuts on hand for after-school munchies.

I won't skip meals.

I will have a bran muffin, cheese or plain yogurt for mid-morning break, rather than a gooey doughnut.

I will cut down (or cut out) the cream and sugar that I add to coffee or tea.

None of these resolutions are hard to follow. Be realistic, and honest, though. Pick out one or two that you know you'll stick to — then add a couple more later on in the year. Keep this up until each resolution becomes a habit. Keep going back to the list and introduce a new change once you're comfortable with the previous one. Remeber, new behaviour will become a habit. Your goal is to make many of these resolutions a part of your life.

Pneumonia bacteria take hold in a person's body when defences have been weakened by illness, old age, or malnutrition. The onset of pneumonia can vary from gradual to sudden. Among the most common symptoms are a high fever, chills, chest pain, and coughing. In time, the lips, tongue and earlobes of the sufferer may take on a bluish appearance.

Thirty years ago pneumonia was a dreaded disease — fatal for twenty-five per cent of the people who contacted it. Even today one cannot take this disease lightly or presume that a complete recovery is guaranteed. Prompt treatment by a physician and plenty of rest are necessary steps toward a cure.

Pneumonia is a folder that discusses the different types of pneumonia and the attention which they require. For your free copy, write to: B.C. Lung Association, 906 West Broadway, Vancouver V5Z 1K7.

The bidding:

1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	4 ♡

Opening lead — three of hearts.

A declarer frequently runs into difficult guess situations — because that is the nature of the game — but some of these guesses can be resolved by avoiding them altogether.

Here is a typical case where South went down one in a contract he should have made. East took the first two tricks with the Q-K of hearts and continued with the ace. When declarer ruffed with the nine, West overruffed with the king and shifted to a club. South won with the ace and, having already lost three tricks, had to guess which way to take the two-way diamond finesse.

Unfortunately, he decided that East, who had entered the bidding all by himself with four hearts, was more likely to have the queen of diamonds than West. Accordingly, declarer led the king of diamonds and then finessed the jack to go down one.

True, South was unlucky to find West with both the king of spades and queen of diamonds. Most of the time, East would have held either or both of these cards. But, even so, declarer should have made four spades. In effect, South had relied more on a probability than a certainty.

Instead, South should have ruffed the heart lead at trick three with the ace of trumps, thus conceding a trump trick to the enemy without making any effort to avoid it.

Declarer next plays a club to the ace and then ruffs dummy's jack of clubs. South now exits with a trump, not concerned at all about which defender has the king of trumps or which suit that player returns.

By playing this way, declarer is sure to make the contract. The defender with the king of trumps is forced to make a favorable return, whether it is a diamond that eliminates the guess in that suit, or a different suit that hands declarer a ruff and discard.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis on prestige, civic honors, promotion, added recognition from superiors. Be thorough — hidden clause is "waiting" to be discovered. Scorpio, Aquarius natives figure prominently. Obstacle to progress is removed.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Good aspects tell of better communications, publishing, special invitations that could include travel. Member of opposite sex states views in forceful manner. You are due for pleasant surprise — and life will be worth living with zest!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Highlight authority, power, determination, creative drive — you will get job done. Individual who depends on you may try to return some favors. Be receptive, but don't expect windfall. There may be ulterior motive!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Personal magnetism dominates — people are drawn to you, are interested in what you do, say. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently. Change, speculation, travel, variety are featured. If single, marriage prospects come into focus. If married, you "rediscover" mate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): New approach to longstanding problem could result in a more constructive, independent course. Accent on property, relations with older individual, basic issues and security. Leo, and another Aquarian figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Obtain valid hint by reading Aquarius message. Look beyond the immediate — expand horizons, ask questions, give full rein to intellectual curiosity. You receive unusual social invitation. Accept. Relative is due to make major concession.

IF JANUARY 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are introspective, creative, unorthodox, your own worst critic and you respond unusually well during crisis periods. You are spiritual, sensitive and psychic. It is not easy for others to fool you, but you often do a good job in the department of self-deception. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. September could be your most memorable month of 1980, a year highlighting authority, responsibility, financial reward and a most serious relationship.

Sakharov speaks out despite being exiled

MOSCOW (AP) — Andrei Sakharov today defied the Kremlin's attempt to gag him by asking "sportsmen and lovers of sports" to demand the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan. It was seen as an effort to win support for a boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

Dissident sources said Sakharov telephoned Maria Podyapolskaya, a friend in Moscow, from his banishment in Gorky to expand on a declaration condemning the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

The original declaration, signed by Sakharov and several other Soviet dissidents earlier this week, was addressed to the Soviet and world public, workers, businessmen and religious believers. In his phone call today, the sources said Sakharov asked that "sportsmen and lovers of sport" be added.

In his first message from exile on Wednesday, Sakharov said: "Everything all right." But the government accused the leader in the fight for human rights in the Soviet Union of spilling state secrets to Westerners.

Relatives of the 58-year-old nuclear physicist and his wife received two telegrams Wednesday from Gorky, the industrial city 400 kilometres east of Moscow to which he was banished on Tuesday.

"Everything all right," said one message. "Warm but cold on the street. Just unfamiliar. Feel well."

The other said: "Frost, sun, taking walks."

The relatives said they believe the messages are authentic because they were signed "Lyusya," Mrs. Sakharov's nickname.

Sakharov, one of the developers of the Soviet hydrogen bomb and the winner of the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize because of his fight for human rights, had escaped arrest for more than 13 years of dissident activity. But on Tuesday he was taken into custody, stripped of his official honors and exiled from Moscow to the Volga River city of Gorky, which is off limits to foreign reporters.

Sakharov's wife, Yelena, was allowed to accompany him.

The government newspaper Izvestia said that Sakharov "stepped onto the path of direct betrayal of the interests of our motherland."

Other Three Mile Islands possible: investigators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investigators hired by the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission warned today that nuclear accidents like the one last year at Three Mile Island "could have happened in a lot of places."

Moreover, there's nothing to keep similar accidents from occurring elsewhere in the future, the group said, adding that new nuclear plants should be at least 16 kilometres from cities to reduce the small but worrisome risk of accidental radiation exposure.

The Three Mile Island plant came within 30 to 60 minutes of a "meltdown" of its radioactive fuel, an event that would have required "at least the precautionary evacuation of thousands" of residents from the surrounding area near Harrisburg, Pa., the special inquiry group said after its seven-month investigation of the accident.

The special inquiry was headed by lawyer Mitchell Rogovin.

Although his law firm was hired by the commission, it delivered the same unwelcome advice President Carter's Kemeny commission had submitted earlier: Abolish the five-member commission and replace it with a single administrator.

Both Carter and the commission have previously rejected that idea, claiming the existing commission structure can be made more effective.

The Rogovin group also:

— Urged the commission not to take up construction applications for new nuclear plants until it considers major reforms in the licensing process.

— Reaffirmed earlier reports that a stuck-open valve leaked cooling water from the Three Mile Island reactor for more than two hours until someone belatedly closed a back-up valve.

— Said if meltdown had occurred the reactor building probably would have held in the radioactive materials, but not certainly. Evacuation of the immediate area would have been a necessary precaution.

— Noted that improvements have already been made, but added that unless fundamental changes take place in construction, operation and licensing, "similar accidents — perhaps with the potentially serious consequences to public health and safety that were only narrowly averted at Three Mile Island — are likely to recur."

DC-10 pylon cleared

WASHINGTON (AP) — A six-month study shows that the pylon of the DC-10 jetliner is fundamentally sound and confirms earlier findings that American Airlines maintenance practices led to the crash of one of the big jets in Chicago last May, the federal aviation administration reported Wednesday.

The agency said the extensive study cleared the pylon, saying it could serve for 25 years without failure unless damaged during maintenance.

As a result of the review, the administration said it is proposing mandatory minor modifications to prevent the kind of maintenance-induced damage that separated the left-wing pylon and engine from the Chicago plane on takeoff. A total of 273 people were killed in the accident, the worst in U.S. aviation history.

The study was directed at the pylon, which connects the wing. It was conducted by McDonnell Douglas, the DC-10 manufacturer. The results were reviewed by the U.S. Air Force's aeronautical systems division and by the administration in consultation with a team of non-government aeronautical engineers.

The review's finding is that "the DC-10 wing pylon is of sound design, material, specification, construction and performance and, as such, meets all the applicable criteria and certification requirements set forth in the federal aviation regulations."

It said the pylon design life is about 73,000 flight hours, equal to about 25 years in airline service — longer than the design life of the DC-10 itself.

It concluded that maintenance abuse of the type uncovered in the Chicago accident "can render the aft pylon bulkhead unsafe."

Investigation showed that the pylon bulkhead on the Chicago plane had been cracked two months before the accident when the engine and pylon had been removed as a unit for maintenance.

Health bug puts bite on Scotch export

LONDON (Reuter) — The physical fitness craze in the United States may have made Americans healthier, but it has brought gloom to makers of Scotch.

Sales to the United States, where one third of the Scotch in the world is sold, had been hurt by the craze, the Scotch Whisky Association said on Tuesday.

"They are now drinking white wine and mineral water instead," a spokesman said. He did not give any figures on sales to the United States.

Overall, however, Scotch had a successful year in 1979, earning a record $1.6 billion in exports.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Plant lobelia in January

gardening
jack beastall

Mentioning hanging baskets in January may seem out of order, yet it is something we have to think about and start planning.

The persons who said today's successes are the result of yesterday's careful preparations must have been a gardener, for gardeners have to constantly plan months ahead if their dreams are to be realized.

In the case of hanging baskets there is one familiar summer bedding annual that is used extensively, and the seed has to be sown by the end of January to have the plants showing first blooms by the end of May.

This popular annual is Lobelia, the trailing variety for window boxes, balcony planters, and hanging baskets, and the bush upright forms for patio planters window boxes, balcony planters, and edgings to beds of annuals.

While the seed germinates readily, growth is slow. Unless an early start is made we have to wait until July before we obtain the color effects we desire.

At 20°C the seed will germinate in 10 to 20 days. After the seedlings have been pricked out into boxes or peat pots the growing temperature must be in the 8-to-10°C range. The 22° house temperature is far too high.

The normal seed packet contains about 2,000 seeds and the resulting seedlings are very tiny. Because of this the seedlings are not pricked out separately as is the rule with all other annuals.

Approximately eight seedlings are set into one hole to give a good-looking plant. Although the seedlings are set out in bunches it is still necessary to sow the seed as thinly as possible.

A common phrase among gardeners is "blue lobelia" which implies flowers only in shades of blue, but a glance into today's seed catalogues reveals pure white and carmine-reds with light and dark green foliage to effectively set off these colors.

The trailing forms are blue contrasting well with interplanted whites in a hanging [illegible] The red, white [illegible] blue upright types can be judiciously mixed in balcony planters, window boxes, patio planters and ground beds. Better effects are produced when separate colors are grown and the plants mixed to a prearranged color plan than by growing mixtures, the colors of which cannot be determined until the plants make their first flowers.

In the trailing types, the large light blue flowers of Blue Cascade contrast well with Trailing Sapphire (Sapphire pendula), which has deep blue flowers with a white eye.

In the upright or bush types, Crystal Palace produces masses of clear dark blue blooms against dark green foliage; Mrs. Clibran has light green foliage and deep blue blooms with a white eye; Rosamond is smothered with carmine-red flowers set off with a white eye; White Lady is pure white; Cambridge Blue is a light blue.

A fairly recent introduction that has not reached the popularity it deserves is Blue Butterfly, a seven-inch plant compared with the foregoing four-inch types.

This variety produces a profusion of bright purple-blue flowers which persist through hot weather, the blooms being about three times as large as the old favorites, truly show pieces in their own right not to be mixed with the smaller bush types.

Possibly gardeners have failed with this "giant" because germinating temperature is a maximum of 10°C, considerably less than needed for the bush and trailing varieties. High temperatures result in poor germination and weak seedlings that fail to survive.

Airport bus line gathers support

Support is growing for Convair Coach Lines' fight against a Motor Carrier Commission decision ordering the company to end its twice-daily service from Victoria to Vancouver International Airport.

But Convair doesn't appear ready to climb in the ring to do battle.

Right after the rejection by the Motor Carrier Commission on Jan. 10, Convair manager Cindy Bescott said her firm would appeal the decision. By this morning no appeal had been filed with the Provincial Secretary.

But support has been popping up, fed partly by what Motor Carrier inspector Jack Haines called false information.

He said the misinformation includes reports that Convair's licence had been taken away (it hasn't) and that the commission, in denying Convair's application to provide something for which it isn't licensed, called the Victoria-Vancouver airport service run an "inessential service."

The word "inessential" doesn't appear anywhere in the commission's order.

Esquimalt Ald. Colin Blair said he intended, as a director of the Victoria Information Centre, to write to the chairman of the commission and to Highways Minister Alex Fraser to have them reconsider the matter.

Blair was upset that the hearing on Convair's application was held in Vancouver.

"There should have been an opportunity for some Victoria input before they made the decision," Blair said. "Victoria should have every link to the mainland possible."

Oak Bay council also has protested.

The latest objector is Conservative MP Don Munro, who has written to the commission to ask that Convair be allowed to continue the service.

Convair spokesman Al Whaley explained that his company's licence permits it to carry only those passengers who book a trip through any of five Victoria travel agencies.

The service takes customers from the Dominion Hotel on Yates to Vancouver airport, although its licence, originally issued to Alexander Izatt of Saanichton on April 12, 1976, allows the pickup of passengers anywhere within 25 miles of Victoria.

Convair had been selling tickets directly to customers and stamping a travel agent's name on the $14 one-way tickets, figuring that as long as the travel agents were getting their commission there shouldn't be any problem.

Convair's only bus was making the airport trip twice daily. If extra equipment is ever needed, Whaley argued, Convair has access to the 28 or so other buses owned by Kay's Transportation, the Burnaby firm that bought Convair in May.

In the hearing on Convair's application, the Burnaby firm was referred to as the "mother" company, and the commission notes in its order that "as an individual corporate entity, it (Convair) owns relatively insignificant assets and does not even maintain an operating bank account in its own name."

The commissioners also criticized Convair for operating the service "contrary to its existing Conditions of Licence, under the guise of providing a charter service for a group of travel agents."

It was also noted that Hustle Bus Ltd. is already licensed to provide the service Convair wanted to provide.

Convair wanted to continue selling tickets directly to the public, but the commission accepted the arguments of the two objectors, Hustle Bus and Marguerite Tours Ltd., both of 818 Douglas.

Hustle Bus is licensed to carry passengers to and from Victoria airport, and to the Vancouver airport whenever a plane is grounded here and passengers have to be shuttled to Vancouver.

The woman who answers the Hustle Bus phone said that company will initiate a regular service between downtown Victoria and Vancouver airport but she was unable to say when.

Messages left for Hustle Bus owner and former NDP MLA James Gorst have gone unanswered.

Park offer declined

Juan de Fuca Parks and Recreation Commission Tuesday declined to take over park property on Glen Lake in Langford.

The commission decided against accepting the property from the provincial government because it has no immediate use for it. The land was dedicated as park land when a nearby subdivision was developed.

Don't cancel Russia trip . . . yet

Travellers with bookings for the Moscow Olympics are being advised to wait for further developments before deciding to cancel their trips.

Noreen van Beelen, manager of Sears Travel Service in Victoria, said Wednesday that until the next meeting of the International Olympic Committee in February it won't be known if the Olympics in Moscow will be cancelled or not.

President Jimmy Carter has recommended to the U.S. Olympic Committee that the Games be moved to another location or be boycotted if the Soviet Union does not withdraw troops from Afghanistan by Feb. 20.

Van Beelen said Sears, which has the national contract to handle all Olympic tour bookings, has been receiving inquiries from travellers hoping to attend the Moscow Olympics.

"It seems that everyone is really committed to the trip and we haven't had any cancellations," she said.

About 100 from the Victoria area are booked on tours to Moscow, she said.

If the Olympics are cancelled each traveller will forfeit $100 of their tour cost, she said.

This is a somewhat unusual procedure but necessary, she said, because the travel agencies have been working for two years on the special arrangements for the tours.

Costs of tours vary from $1,700 for low-budget student tours to about $3,000 for longer, more elaborate tours, said van Beelen.

Canadians in this respect are a lot luckier than Americans who booked to attend the games.

More than 10,000 people who paid a New York travel agency in advance for trips to the Moscow Olympics may not be able to get their money back, state officials say.

The customers may fail to get refunds, a spokesman for the state attorney-general's office explained, because the Soviets may not make refunds.

Olympic packages offered by the agency include a 15-day trip for $1,550 and a 22-day deal for $1,850. Added to the prices were tickets to various events, with prices ranging from $3 to $40 each.

A Los Angeles couple filed suit Wednesday in a New York state court demanding a refund from RTB Olympic Travel, which has collected $14 million from people around the country for trips to the Moscow Olympics.

Girl critical after auto blow

An 11-year-old girl is in critical condition in Victoria General Hospital after being struck by a van on Finlayson near Glasgow Wednesday afternoon.

City police said Kim Alexandra Murray, 855 Villance, was running across the road to join two companions when hit by the van driven by Leonard Richard Dube, 36, of 3937 Leeds Court.

Police said the girl was thrown against the back of another van stopped in a line of traffic waiting for the light on Quadra to change and hit her head. She suffered severe internal injuries.

The accident occurred at 4:25 p.m. as the girl and two friends were walking home.

Grants awarded UVic research

Research grants worth more than $380,900 have been awarded to University of Victoria professors.

The Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council of Canada donated $181,125 to continue the work of scientists working on aquatic and marine pollution.

A grant of $100,000 from the World Health Organization was given to Dr. Terry Pearson, an immunologist in the department of biochemistry and microbiology.

He is trying to develop a simple test to diagnose sleeping sickness.

And professors in education, arts and science will get $99,820 to allow them to carry on studies for periods of six months to a year in the 1980-81 academic year.

Pearson's award covers three years and will pay for research assistants and work here and in Africa.

Three additional strategic grants were given.

One of $40,200 went to Dr. Reg Clements' for additional work on a plasma ignition system for cold-starting diesels while $20,000 was awarded to Drs. M.J. Ashwood-Smith and P.R. West to research potential indicators of genetic mutations in marine life and $17,595 to Dr. George Mackie for his study of the fish food chain.

Carter Doctrine sets out U.S. interests

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Using his State of the Union address to issue a 20th century version of the Monroe Doctrine, President Carter has sent the Soviet Union an unequivocal warning: keep out of the Persian Gulf — or else.

To back up his tough words, the president said he intends to push for legislation to finance the resumption of draft registration and end "unwarranted restraints" on America's intelligence agencies.

"An attempt by any outside force to gain control of the Persian Gulf region will be regarded as an assault on the vital interests of the United States of America," Carter said, affirming what may one day come to be called the Carter Doctrine.

In his nationally televised message to a joint session of Congress Wednesday night, the president said "such an assault will be repelled by use of any means necessary, including military force."

The U.S. Congress appears ready to back the tough new doctrine, although reaction was split along partisan lines. Most Democrats praising the strong warning to the Soviet Union but many Republicans calling it a political speech lacking in substance.

The House also voted overwhelmingly to keep U.S. athletes home from the 1980 Summer Olympics unless the games are moved out of the Soviet Union.

The boycott resolution is designed "to send a message of contempt to the Soviet government for their barbaric action," said Rep. William Broomfield (Rep.-Mich.) ranking Republican on the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

A similar resolution on the Moscow games is expected to receive prompt passage in the Senate.

Referring to Carter's speech, House Speaker Thomas O'Neill (Dem.-Mass.) said he is confident Congress will act "responsibly and with courage to any challenge that faces the nation."

Chairman Frank Church (Dem.-Idaho) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said Carter sent "a strong message to the Soviet Union ... I support the president in this position."

"He was rattling the scabbard without anything in it," said House Republican leader John Rhodes of Arizona.

Rep. Robert Bauman (Rep.-Md.) chairman of the American Conservative Union, called it "one of the most incredibly meaningless displays of political pap that I've ever seen."

Meanwhile, in Moscow, the Soviet Tass news agency today described Carter's address as a "demagogical" attempt to extend the claim of U.S. "vital interests" to the entire world.

A Tass story from Washington, the first Soviet reaction to Carter's address, said any allegation of a Soviet move to take control of the Persian Gulf area was "an absurdity."

Noting that Carter mentioned American interests in Europe, the Pacific, the Middle East and Southeast Asia, Tass said: "In other words,

Restart of draft blasted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Groups representing students and women today attacked President Carter's move to resume draft registrations.

Jeff Friedman, eastern director of Students for a Libertarian Society, told a news conference compulsory registration called for by President Carter in his Wednesday State of the Union message is "regimentation and a violation of individual liberty — tyranny."

"True patriots will resist that tyranny," he said.

It is unrealistic to try to contain communism by force of arms, said Friedman.

"A return to the Cold War does not address the causes of our foreign policy problems — it exacerbates them," he said.

The organization, which claims over 100 chapters in the United States, staged rallies last year in opposition to proposed bills in Congress for the resumption of registration. The bills never were acted on.

Also in Washington today, the National Organization for Women attacked Carter's call for registration, charging it is a first step in bringing back the "sexist and racist" draft.

"We are opposed to reinstatement of compulsory registration," said NOW President Eleanor Smeal.

Carter has not made clear whether any return to registration would include mandatory signing up by young women as well as men.

The president was informed today that preparations for mandatory military registration could be completed in several months.

Speaker to investigate RCMP bug of Nielsen

The speaker of the B.C. Legislature will enquire into the bugging of a minister's office by the RCMP.

Speaker Harvey Schroeder, who is responsible for the legislative precinct, said today he will report his findings directly to the legislature.

Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen testified in Vancouver Wednesday the RCMP secretly bugged his office while investigating an alleged bribery conspiracy.

He said he was not informed of the electronic surveillance until months afterwards.

Schroeder reserved comment on the propriety of the RCMP's action until he has had a chance to check precedents and "until I get some cracking good advice."

He expects to report to the house early in the spring session expected to open in March.

Schroeder said the bugging of Nielsen's office is the only such incident that he is aware of.

The incident raises questions about the 400-year-old tradition of parliamentary protection of members.

For example, police may not come into the legislative precinct to arrest a member.

Schroeder would not offer an opinion on whether members are also protected from bugging and wiretapping or whether the RCMP had somehow violated Nielsen's oath of cabinet secrecy.

The speaker pointed out that traditional protections have been changed over the years as experience dictated.

He said if B.C. MLA's need increased parliamentary privileges to protect themselves against modern invasions of privacy it is up to them to make the necessary changes.

Nielsen — a former environment minister in the B.C. cabinet — was testifying at the county court trial of former Vancouver radio openliner Ed Murphy and Vancouver businessman Douglas Holme.

They are charged with conspiring to offer Nielsen a benefit and one count each of conspiring to procure Nielsen to breach the trust of his office.

The Crown alleges Murphy and Holme conspired to offer Nielsen a $100,000 bribe for his influence in removing 80 acres of land in Richmond from the agricultural land reserve.

After testifying about police electronic eavesdropping in his office, Nielsen denied ever being offered money for his services. He said he was never approached by either of the accused to breach the trust of his office, and denied ever meeting or talking to Holme.

Nielsen said that although he was chairman of the agricultural land use committee, it would have been impossible for him to act on his own to try to have farmland removed from the reserve.

Earthquake shakes San Francisco area

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A strong earthquake shook a huge area of Northern California today. There were no immediate reports of damage.

Highrise buildings in downtown San Francisco swayed and the quake was felt sharply 75 miles east at Sacramento, the state capital.

Reports of strong shocks also were received from San Jose to the south and communities as far as 50 miles north of San Francisco.

At Livermore, 50 miles southeast of San Francisco, damage to Insterstate Highway 580 was reported.

Telephone service was disrupted in many areas, possibly from overload.

The quake was felt at 11 a.m. as a sharp jolt. Earth rumbling continued for about 30 seconds.

In San Francisco, Oakland, Stockton and other places, the quake tumbled objects and opened file cabinets. But there were not immediate reports of heavy damage.

"When I sat at my desk, I didn't know if the building was going to stop moving or not," said Lyn Hennion, at a school office on the San Francisco Peninsula.

"The ground just shook from side to side," said a reporter at the Argus-Courier office in Petaluma, north of San Francisco.

"It was a long, sustained one, sort of rocking for a while," said Jeff Levine in San Rafael.

Air rates up 5 to 13%

GENEVA (UPI) — World airlines agreed today to raise passenger fares and freight rates by between 5 and 13 per cent to compensate for the latest round of oil price increases, the International Air Transport Association said.

The new rates, which vary depending on route, geographic location and type of ticket, are subject to government approval.

About 120 cost experts from 60 major airlines formulated increases of between 5 and 10 per cent for passenger fares to be effective April 1, and between 6 and 13 per cent for cargo rates effective March 1.

On routes to and from the United States and Europe, passenger fares will go up by an average of 10 per cent, with a plus-or-minus figure of 2 per cent for airlines to use at their own discretion. Cargo rates on these routes will rise a flat 12 per cent.

On Europe-Africa routes increases will be between 8 and 9 per cent on passenger fares, and 10 per cent on freight rates. Canada-Europe passenger fares will increase by 8 per cent and cargo rates by 13 per cent.

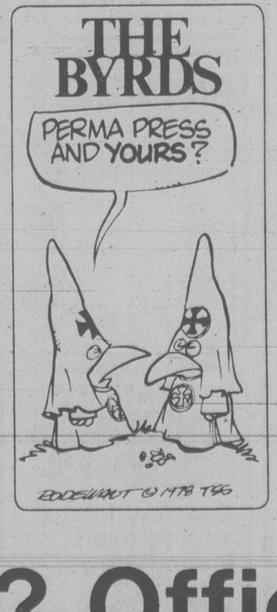
"There is no simple across-the-board figure, and specific fares and rates in national currency selling prices will be announced by the individual carriers, after processing and the necessary government approvals," an IATA spokesman said.

Further complicating the situation was the difference of fuel prices in various areas of the world.

"Recognizing that the impact of rising fuel costs varies in different regions of the world, the airlines have negotiated a range of area and sub-area percentages," the spokesman said.

Gold going up

LONDON (AP) — Gold resumed its upward surge today, reaching $717 U.S. — $831 Canadian — a troy ounce at the afternoon fixing price in London after closing at $692.50 in London on Wednesday. The morning fixing price in London was $712. The U.S. dollar was little changed.



Shaky peace for BCR

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Railway had the way cleared Wednesday night to get its seven unions back on the tracks today.

The return to normal operations was made possible when the B.C. Labor Relations board ordered a handful of dissident trainmen to remove pickets they had set up earlier in the day at the railway's main North Vancouver yard and at the Squamish terminal north of here.

The trainmen were seeking reinstatement of an overtime pay formula, not included in the contract proposal announced last Friday by Labor Minister Jack Heinrich after the breakdown of negotiations between the Crown-owned railway and the seven-unit Joint Council of Railway Unions.

The council agreed at that time to have its members return to work while a ratification vote was taken. The return was short-lived, however, as the 450-member United Transportation Union refused to go back during the weekend until a poll of members was taken.

That vote showed most opposed continuing the strike.

The railway then geared up for a Wednesday morning start up, but about 10 dissident UTA members picketed, partly hampering the resumption of service.

The railway applied to the board for a cease-and-desist order under the bargaining-in-bad-faith section of the province's labor code.

Heinrich said the pickets represented a "disgruntled few" of the railway's 2,200 employees.

He said a large majority want to work and are prepared to accept his settlement.

Drug overdoses down? Officials can't agree

Officials of Victoria's two major hospitals say there has been a marked reduction in the number of people admitted for treatment of drug overdose.

But the provincial Poison Control Centre in Vancouver disputes the hospitals' figures and says the problem is as bad as it has ever been and possibly even worse.

The centre, based in St. Paul's Hospital in Vancouver, suggests the decline is imaginary and nothing more than a statistical error.

"We have found some hospitals such as Victoria General are not reporting all the overdose cases they are handling," a spokesman for the centre said Wednesday.

The provincial department of vital statistics agrees.

"It's been a continuing problem," a statistician said. "We aren't getting all the figures and the VGH, as large as it is, has an effect on the total picture."

The Victoria Crisis Centre also reports there has been no dramatic change in the number of calls it has been receiving.

A spokesman for VGH reports drug overdose admissions dropped from an average of 55 a month for the first six months of 1977 to 38 a month for the same period last year.

At RJH the average fell from 63 a month in 1977 to an average of 40 a month for the period April to December last year.

No one seems to know the reason for the decline which has come as a surprise to hospital officials.

"I don't know if people are learning to cope better at home or what's happening," one emergency room nurse said.

Said Keith Anderson, head of social services at VGH:

"All we can do is speculate. It could be the agencies are doing a better job picking up potential overdose cases. Or maybe people are becoming more inclined to go to the detoxification centre rather than the hospital for help."

Anderson wonders also if changes in VGH's classification system may account for the drop.

Possibly, he said, what was once considered a drug overdose is now being statistically recorded as something else.

The poison centre said there is no indication of a decline in overdoses anywhere in the province — including the Victoria area.

"We don't feel the numbers are dropping," the spokesman said. "If anything the number of poisonings seem to be climbing each year."

The Crisis Centre handled an average of 856 calls dring the first six months of 1977; there were 909 calls for the same period last year.

Anderson said the majority of drug overdoses appear to be deliberate and about a third of the victims are under 20 years of age. Generally there are more women than men.

The number of cases involving elderly people has also grown in recent years, an indication to Anderson that more and more senior citizens are feeling isolated, lonely and are losing a sense of worth or usefulness to their lives.

An emergency room nurse at RJH said she hadn't seen a street drug overdose for two or three years, even though the Greater Victoria police drug unit has noted tranquilizers, uppers and downers are becoming more widely used in the drug sub-culture.

Earthquake shakes San Francisco area

Times News Services

SAN FRANCISCO — A strong earthquake, centered east of San Francisco near a nuclear weapons research laboratory, shook a large area of Northern California today.

The quake caused some damage and widespread alarm. There were reports of minor injuries from several cities.

The Berkeley Seismographic Station said the quake, which occurred at 11 a.m. PST (2 p.m. EST) and lasted about 20 seconds, registered 5.8 on the Richter scale and was centred 48 kilometres southeast of Berkeley near Livermore.

In Livermore, which is near the Calaveras fault, there were reports of a half-dozen injuries, minor damage to some buildings, gas leaks at two schools and some disruption of telephone service. Officials at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory, where nuclear research is performed, said there was no damage to the reactor. Some buildings were evacuated.

In Stockton, authorities reported some cracked buildings.

An earthquake that measured 5.9 on the Richter scale hit San Francisco last Aug. 6. That quake, centred near Hollister, was one of the strongest since the 1906 earthquake that levelled much of San Francisco.

The earthquake of 1906 has been estimated at 7.9 on the Richter scale.

New York

The stock market responded to President Carter's State of the Union message with a broad advance today.

Analysts said Carter's declaration Wednesday night that the United States would use "any means necessary, including military force" to defend the Persian Gulf against any attack was welcomed on Wall Street.

Carter also proposed a resumption of Selective Service registration as a measure of preparedness should the need arise for mobilization of forces.

Brokers noted that the speech gave new impetus to recent speculation among investors that spending for defense and technological research might step up economic activity considerably in the next several years.

Among Canadian issues on the NYSE, Dome Mines rose 1⅜ to $56⅞, McIntyre Mines 1 to $66¾, Hudson Bay Mining ¾ to $29¾, Campbell Red Lake Mines ⅝ to $30½, Ashland Oil ⅝ to $41⅝ and Inco ⅜ to 27½.
